DAVID

'When you are a member of a dysfunctional organisation like the EU that can neither reform nor restructure you have two choices: either to reluctantly remain in the organisation or be brave enough to leave.'

David Owen

was for many years an MP in Plymouth. He left senior positions in the Labour party to help form the Social Democratic Party. He has since returned to the Labour Party. Despite initially supporting British membership he is now opposed to Britain's membership of the European Union.

'The Eurozone is economically stagnant. Not just suffering from appallingly high unemployment but already a dysfunctional Union. It is essential that Britain in leaving the EU has the courage, the imagination and the flair to find new global markets, become more competitive with even better design and quality than hitherto.'

'The advantage of David Cameron's negotiation is that it has shown up why it is now too late to reform the EU from within in any significant way.'

Like David many progressives oppose the EU because it is beyond reform.
