REPORT
OF THE COMMITTEE FOR 1913.

THE past year has once again been a checkered one in our Suffrage agitation. The arbitrary rejection of Mr. Dickenson's Bill by the House of Commons, on the 6th of May, by 267 votes, as against 221, (majority 46), was a heavy disappointment. That Bill,—a much more liberal one than the Conciliation Bill of the previous year,—would, if passed, have conferred the vote not only upon women householders of twenty-five years of age, and upwards, but also upon the wives of men householders, under the same limitation; it was ushered in by an excellent debate, in which Mr. Philip Snowden, and Sir Edward Grey, more especially, made admirable speeches in its support; and its second reading would have been carried if a large proportion of our Irish Representatives had not been deterred by party considerations from voting in accordance with their convictions. Two other causes, however, contributed to the result. A considerable number of our English and Scottish supporters voted against the Bill, as a protest against the action of our militants; and several of the Labour Members, who were otherwise favorable, were absent upon Trade Union business. As the same conjunction of hostile influences is hardly likely to recur, we may not unreasonably trust that when next the Bill comes before the House of Commons for consideration, it will meet with a different reception.

In the meantime, however, this unmerited rebuff by the majority of their Parliamentary Representatives was splendidly replied to by the women of Great Britain in their memorable Pilgrimage to London, culminating, upon the 26th of July, in the magnificent Demonstration in Hyde Park. That Pilgrimage, in which two members of our Committee, Mr. and Mrs. Haslam, and Miss Edith Webb, one of our Subscribers, were privileged to take part, was an unexampled event in the history of the United Kingdom. The five or six thousand women who, at various stages, composed it, were amongst the most intelligent, level-headed, and law-abiding, in England; and, in the course of their journeyings, they must have held several hundred wayside and in-door Meetings, and must have demonstrated the reasonableness of their claims, and of the constitutional methods by which they are promoting them, to some hundreds of thousands of sympathising listeners. For six weeks a large number of the Pilgrims journeyed on foot, in fair weather and foul, from such widely-scattered places as Newcastle and Carlisle in the North, and the Land's End, Portsmouth, and Brighton, in the South; and everywhere they received a cordial welcome, and hospitality, from thousands of entertainers; and a notable feature of the Pilgrimage was the sympathy and support accorded them, not only by the Mayors, and Councillors, of the Towns through which they passed, but also by distinguished Clergymen, of various Denominations, who delivered forcible addresses, and even sermons, in their favor. The Demonstration in Hyde Park was, by universal agreement, a triumphant success. The immense crowd of spectators was addressed, from nineteen platforms, by Mrs. Fawcett, President of the National Union of Women Suffrage Societies, Mrs. C. Chapman Catt, President of the International, Councillor Margaret Ashton, Mrs. Philip Snowden, Mr. Dickenson, M.P., and nearly seventy other capable speakers; and, from start to finish, the Pilgrimage was a triumph, not only for our constitutional methods of advocacy, but also for the masterly skill displayed by the Branch Societies in carrying out the detailed arrangements.

From the world-wide point of view, however, the Meeting of the Congress of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, held at Budapest, from the 15th to the 21st of June, and attended by Lady Dockrell, as our Delegate, was the great event of the year. Including about 500 Delegates and Associates, and 230 Representatives of the world's Press, the number present at the Meetings amounted to nearly 3,000. Naturally the majority were Hungarians; but there were visitors from all the leading Countries of Europe, and many from America. The following condensed account we take from the pages of Jus Suffragii :—

Standing room was filled by eager listeners at all the public Sessions; and an overflow Meeting had to be arranged for the chief evening gathering. A British Duchess graced the platform; and several titled Hungarians took a leading part in the proceedings. Amongst these were the Countess Teleki, the Countess Haller, and the Countess Apponyi, all distinguished members of the aristocracy. A group of peasant women, with grey shawls over their heads, formed an interesting feature of the daily scene; and between these two extremes of society, almost every possible variety was represented. There were women clergymen, lawyers, physicians, journalists, authors, actresses, Members of Parliament, City Councillors, and workers of every class, as well as women taxpayers, and householders, in large numbers. There were sixty women from Norway, Finland, Australia, and the United States, who possess the same political rights as the men of their respective Countries; and not only were Delegates sent from Norway, Finland, Australia, and the American States of Washington, and Oregon, but their expenses were paid by their respective Governments. Twenty-seven Countries were represented; and Mrs. C. Chapman Catt presided with all her wonted dignity, courtesy, and efficiency. From her most stimulating opening address, together with the Reports received from the various Nationalities, from Jus Suffragii, &c., we glean a few particulars :—

Nine years ago, when the Alliance was first completely organised, there were only eight Nations which had Woman Suffrage Associations. Now, with the exception of the Spanish American Republics, there are, in the entire world, only seven constitutionally independent Nations without an organised Woman Suffrage movement. Only three of these are in Europe,—namely Greece, Spain, and the Duchy of Luxemburg. The remaining four are the Negro Republic of Liberia, in Western Africa, Turkey, Persia, and Japan. During those nine years the progress has been phenomenal; and, the entire world over, there has been nothing to indicate reaction. From every land it is reported that there are more Meetings, larger audiences, more speakers, more writers, more money contributions, more influential advocates, more space in the Press, more favorable editorials, more earnest supporters in the Parliaments, more subscribing members, more and better organisation, and, best of all, more consecration,—all unfailing signs of the growing power of a great movement.

In the United States, during the past year, the State of Illinois, and the Territory of Alaska, have been added to the list of those in which women have been enfranchised; and, in the four States of Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Nevada, the vote for enfranchisement has passed the Legislatures, and only waits for endorsement by the Electors. Far beyond those limits too there is hardly a State in which progress is not being made in various directions. In Canada, again, the enfranchisement of women, upon the same terms as men, is being actively pushed forward in all the Provinces.—In Australia, the equal pay of women for equal work is becoming universal.—In South Africa, where the Enfranchisement Association has been in existence for less than two years, the organisation has been extending itself throughout the entire Union.—In France, as an indication of the steady growth of public opinion, the Paris Council has recently passed a Resolution in favor of conferring the Municipal vote upon women.—In both Holland and Belgium the revision of the Constitution, together with the enfranchisement of women, is in contemplation, and cannot much longer be postponed.—In Norway the universal enfranchisement, with eligibility, of both men and women, has been established; one woman has already been elected to the Storting; and nearly every Government Office has been thrown open to women.—In Sweden the men are not so progressive as their brothers in Norway; a majority of the Lower House still remains hostile; but the women are exceedingly active; and strong hopes are entertained respecting the Elections of the coming year.—In Denmark the conditions are very similar; though the Premier has pronounced strongly in favor of enfranchisement, the question has been practically postponed until after the next Elections.—In Finland, at the recent Parliamentary Elections, twenty-one women Candidates were returned at the head of the poll.—In Germany, Austria-Hungary, and their dependant States, the women are indefatigable in their propaganda work; and though no very important victory may have been achieved, the Associations are becoming more powerful every year.—In Switzerland, the new Civil Code has given mothers equal rights with the fathers in relation to the children.—In Italy the Minister of Justice has been preparing a measure which will confer upon women the same civil rights as are enjoyed by men.—In Russia, notwithstanding the repressing influence of the autocratic Government, the question of the Suffrage has been repeatedly brought before the Duma.—In China the recent development has been so rapid that she has now been received into the Alliance; and Mrs. Catt testifies that in Persia, India, and all throughout the East, the awakening of women has become a conspicuous phenomenon.

In the United Kingdom, though we have no Parliamentary triumphs to record, the growth of public opinion in various directions is most satisfactory. The educational influence of the Pilgrimage upon the mind of Mr. Asquith, has been especially noteworthy. His attitude towards the Deputation that waited upon him, on the 8th of August, was distinctly sympathetic, if not ostensibly encouraging. For example:—

“I have always recognised the peculiar difficulties, and hardships even, of the position with regard to the supporters of Women’s Suffrage.”

Again, with reference to the decision of the Speaker, in ruling out the proposed Amendment to the Government Bill:—

“I can tell you quite honestly that no one was more disappointed than I was, and no one regretted it more than I did . . . We intended that the Amendment should have a fair chance; and as for the suggestion, if it is seriously made, that any pressure was brought to bear by the Government, or any section of the Government upon any of our supporters, certainly so far as I am concerned, there is not one shadow of foundation for it.”

Again, respecting the attitude of the Liberal Party:—

“This I will say to you: if the Liberal Party,—I am speaking now of my own Party,—by a majority,—a substantial majority not a casual one,—is in favour of a great measure such as that which you are advocating, it is quite impossible for the minority to obstruct, or prevent the realisation of that. Of that you may be perfectly sure.”

And finally:—

“If you succeed in convincing the judgment and conscience of the British people that this is a desirable and beneficent change, there is no combination in the world which can prevent your success, and there is no Political Party which would attempt to do so. Therefore, if I might in all candour in one word counsel you, it would be to proceed as you have been proceeding, and to continue to the end, and then, I do not know that any of us shall rejoice in a judgment which would be adverse to what we want, but I am perfectly certain if you succeed, as I have said, in persuading the judgment of the people, your most determined opponents would be the first to bow to that, and endeavour to make the change as beneficent as you expect it to be.”

This is quite as much as could be expected from a Prime Minister who is personally hostile. Sir Edward Grey, a cordial friend of Women’s Suffrage, speaks in a different tone. Addressing a Deputation from some of his Suffrage constituents, upon the 27th of October, whilst giving no hope that any enfranchising Bill will be passed by the present House of Commons, he expressed a strong conviction that, provided the Elections are favourable, nothing can prevent such a Bill from passing in the next Parliament:—

“I think the only straight-forward thing to say to advocates of Women’s Suffrage now is that there cannot be progress made in what remains of the present Parliament. . . . No sufficient lifetime of the present Parliament remains. Every thing depends on the next Election, and how the Candidates, who are elected Members, pledge themselves with regard to it. One of you spoke of there being a popular demand for Women’s Suffrage. The real test of that is in the House of Commons. If in the next House of Commons there is a majority which is really in earnest about Women’s Suffrage, I regard it as absolutely certain that it will be carried into law; but till you have that in the House of Commons, it seems to me impossible that any progress should be made.”

Mr. Lloyd George, in an address delivered to a Deputation on the 23rd of October, expressed the same conviction:—

“I do not despair of something,—not an instalment,—I think this is one of the cases where an instalment would be worse than nothing,—I do not despair of a real measure of Women’s Suffrage being carried in this Country in a short time. Not in this Parliament, however; I think this Parliament has been ruined, so far as Suffrage is concerned. . . . I do not despair at all if, at the next General Election women are well organised, and present their case to the electorate rationally, and in a way that shows they are capable of self-restraint, which is the first test of fitness for self-government. I am sure they will be able to make such an impression at the polls that men who are opposed to the Suffrage will find, on the whole, that it will be better for them to re-consider their views, and to pledge themselves to support an advanced measure of Woman Suffrage, which will include not merely picked, selected women, but all the women of Great Britain who have got responsibilities in the Country. That is my hope; and my advice will be that women should undertake a campaign of that character in the way which they have shown they can so well accomplish, and that they should do it with the whole of their energies, between now and the next General Election.”

As coming from three Cabinet Ministers, these are the most encouraging declarations that have ever been made by Members of any of our Governments. But there are plenty of other signs of the rapid advance of public opinion throughout the Kingdom. Mrs. Fawcett has commemorated a number of these in the following sentences:—

“The movement has made a tremendous advance. Mr. Lloyd George’s speech itself is a sign; and there have, within the past twelve months, been many other signs of its progress,—for instance the vote carried by the National Union of Women Workers, in favor of taking definite action to secure women’s enfranchisement, the Resolution carried by the Labour Conference, directing Labour Members to vote against any extension of the Franchise that did not include women, the Resolution of the Trades Union Congress in Manchester, the Resolution of the Men’s Liberal Association in Scotland, and the Resolution that the ‘Provisional Government’ in Ulster should give votes to women.”

The Resolution referred to by Mrs. Fawcett, as carried at the Annual Conference of the National Union of Women Workers, held at Hull in October, was especially satisfactory. The Conference was attended by some 600 Delegates, including Mrs. Townshend, Mrs. Solomons, and Mrs. Moscardi, as representing our Association; and over 3,000 women are reported as having been present at some of the public Meetings. The subject more especially dealt with was the treatment of children; and the Papers, Addresses, and Discussions, under the presidency of Mrs. Allen Bright would, as usual, do credit to any Legislative Body in the world.

So far as Great Britain is concerned, the prospects of an early Women's Suffrage Bill are fairly hopeful. One half of the Members of the present Cabinet are pronouncedly in favor of some measure of enfranchisement. Should Mr. Asquith at any time make up his mind to retire from the Premiership;—and it is sometimes rumoured that he is wearying of its burdens,—he will probably be succeeded by either Sir Edward Grey or Mr. Lloyd George; and, in either case, a Government Bill is almost sure to follow. Should a Unionist Cabinet, however, be the result of the next Parliamentary Elections, we have no data which would justify our speaking with equal confidence; every thing will depend upon the good will of the majority who will be returned. In the case of Ireland nothing seems certain except that Mr. Redmond appears to be still hostile. Our numerous Associations have been exceedingly active during the year, and have held an unprecedented number of influential Meetings throughout the Country; it is to be hoped that the rapid growth of public opinion, and, more especially, the example set him by the Ulster Unionist Association, will hasten Mr. Redmond's conversion; and that should Home Rule be really established in Ireland, he will withdraw an opposition for which no plausible pretext will any longer be available.

In anticipation of the coming Elections, our Hon. Secretary, in November, addressed the following letter to the leading Newspapers throughout Ireland:—

“Will you very kindly permit me to remind your lady readers that the Elections for the Urban and Borough Councils are coming on in January; and that not a day should be lost in selecting suitable women Candidates to fill a fair proportion of those important Offices. It is now universally recognised that the help of capable, experienced women is needed upon all our Local Boards, especially in all matters affecting the well-being of women and children; and the success which has attended their labours as Poor Law Guardians, &c., during the past dozen years, or more, is sufficient guarantee that their services will be equally valuable in the Offices just now open to them. A large proportion of our Electors, both male and female, are fully aware of this, and will everywhere gladly vote for them. The Elections for the Poor Law, and County Council, Boards will not come off till June.”

In pursuance of the same object, we have initiated a General Committee, representing all the Women's Societies in Dublin who are interested in Local Government work, to promote the election of suitable women upon our City Corporation, and our Suburban Bodies. This joint Committee held three Meetings; but finding no women who, under existing conditions, are prepared to offer themselves as Candidates, they decided to adjourn until January, and then re-organise in preparation for the Elections in June.

Our Honorary Secretary, Mrs. Haslam, who has acted in that capacity since the formation of the Association in 1876, and has now reached the advanced age of nearly 85 years, having requested to be released from an Office whose duties she does not any longer consider herself able to discharge efficiently, we decided, however reluctantly, to accept her resignation; and at our Meeting held upon the 13th of November, the following Resolution was proposed by Mrs. Keatinge, seconded by Mrs. Farquharson, and carried unanimously:—"That, in the judgment of this Meeting, the Society shall continue upon the same lines as heretofore; that Mrs. Sanderson be requested to undertake the Honorary Secretaryship, provisionally; and that Mrs. Haslam be elected President of the Association."

Mrs. Haslam desires to add, as the final expression of her Secretaryship, her confident trust that our Subscribers will loyally support the Association by increasing their subscriptions, wherever practicable, so as to enable Mrs. Sanderson to carry on her work successfully.

REPORT FROM CORK BRANCH.

Our work during the year has been quiet, and although not much in evidence, or before the public, still it has been decidedly progressive. Pamphlets, literature and books on "the White Slave Traffic" have been freely distributed with much educational advantage.

On January 23rd, 1913, we sent out a petition to the Members of Parliament for the City and County of Cork. This petition embodied a request that they would give their strenuous support to Mr. Dickenson's proposed Amendment to the Government Reform Bill, and impressed upon them the fact of the long delay in giving women legislative justice.

On March 11th, 1913, we sent out a letter to the principal daily papers all over Ireland protesting most strongly against the unwise and violent actions of the Militants, and entreating all Women Suffrage Societies who had sincerely at heart the advancement of our work to declare their disapproval of such wanton methods.

Our membership will number about the same as last year (80), but we regret the list is not completed and will not be in time to appear in this year's report.

We are sorry we have lost one of our women doctors, Dr. Alice Barry, who held a responsible position for many years at the Cork District Hospital. We wish her every success in her new sphere of labour in Edinburgh.

It is with deep regret we hear of Mrs. Haslam's proposed resignation of the Honorary Secretaryship in Dublin. By a long life of strenuous and conscientious work on women's behalf she has earned our everlasting gratitude. Her labour has ever advanced women's best interests, and it has left an indelible mark on our progress.

We may congratulate ourselves that she will still continue to help and guide this old Association, the oldest in Ireland, through being elected as President.

REPORT FROM LIMERICK BRANCH.

Though this year was fairly uneventful, we have some items of interest to report.

Two very successful Public Meetings were held in the Courthouse, which on each occasion was rather uncomfortably full.

The first in April, on the "White Slave" Traffic, was addressed by Miss Abadam.

Few but she could have so skilfully handled such a delicate subject. Her audience were deeply stirred, and we trust, awakened to the horrors of this evil, and were made to realize that in Women's Suffrage lies a powerful lever for its suppression.

In this Meeting, as in that addressed by Mrs. Colby in October, our Association joined with the Munster Women's Franchise League; both Societies working together to make the Meetings successful.

Mrs. Colby spoke on what the Suffrage has done for Women in America, and brought home to those present the fact that this is a world-wide movement.

When Mr. Redmond visited Limerick in October he was written to by our Association, and the Munster Women's Franchise League, asking him to receive a joint Deputation. He did not reply to our letter until after he had left the City, and then said he regretted being unable to see us.

We have lost a few members from various causes but have gained some new ones, so our membership remains practically unaltered numerically.

REPORT FROM MALLOW BRANCH.

I much regret having so little of interest to report concerning our work here during the past year. The absence of speakers has prevented us from holding any Meetings, which has been a great disappointment but I am glad to be able to state that notwithstanding this serious drawback, I have been able to keep our members fairly in touch with, and interested in the movement, by the distribution of literature; and it is gratifying that some new names have been added to our list; and though some have been removed (owing to departure from the district) our numbers still keep up.

It is encouraging to find that many more men now, as well as women, are willing to recognize the justice of our claim, as well as realize how little our efforts can avail to improve the condition of women workers so long as our hands are tied.

Hopes deferred are making many hearts sick, but we must continue to work, and trust that we may soon see the dawn of a day that will bring emancipation to women. May time go his fastest!

W. F. TOTTENHAM, Hon. Sec.
