Dear Mr. Becker,

I am returning herewith the two newspaper articles you kindly lent me, from which I have found the dates I wanted in connection with Miss Becker's going to London etc.

I found when I got home that I had, after all, not taken the letter from Miss Blackburn: but I do not think it would have added anything essential, so do not bother about it. From my best places & it, it seemed to be about the unimportant affairs of the W.S. Journal, which are not important now.

I am with grateful thanks for letting me see the things, & for giving me the chance of bearing personal reminiscences of me who was certainly one of the remarkable early pioneers of the women's movement.

Yours truly
