Dear Miss Boult,

Your letter of March 18th has just come to hand and I want to send you my warmest thanks for your words of sympathy and tribute.

My dear Emmeline was a wonderful person and I was indeed fortunate to have had her for my mate and for so long a span of time. I cannot feel sorry that she did not linger on to feel the lack of activity and the complete dependence upon others; and she was so ready and anxious to take her departure.

But now that she is gone I feel a bit dazed. It is as though I was at a violin concerto with the violinist absent. I can well understand how it must have taken Mr. Martyn who had so faithfully attended his wife for so long.

Ever yours,

Peter Lawrence.
