ORGAN OF THE NATIONAL UNION OF WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE SOCIETIES (NUMBER OF SOCIETIES IN THE UNION 479).

The National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies is a great association of men and women banded together for the single purpose of obtaining the Parliamentary vote for women on the same terms as it is or may be granted to men. It was founded in 1867, and now number over 52,000 annually-subscribing members, organized into 479 Societies, under the presidentship of Mrs. Henry Fawcett. The colours of the Unic are SCARLET, WHITE, and GREEN. Among its members are people of all parties, and people of none. The cause that unites them is the cause of Women's Suffrage, and they work for victory by peaceful methods only. They utterly repudiate methods of violence and rely on political pressure and the education of public opinion. WILL YOU JOIN? (Membership form on p. 1031.)

A Dramatic Opportunity.

The Premier has resigned his seat, and seeks re-election. The contest has come with dramatic suddenness, and the plan of campaign of the National Union has not been decided as we go to press; but in any case, the contest affords a magnificent opportunity for Suffragists. The Scottish Federation of the N.U.W.S.S. were in the field at once. Indeed, the news of the Prime Minister's resignation was in the papers on Monday night, and on Tuesday morning The Common Cause received a report of the beginning of the National Union campaign! It is up to every member of the Union to be as prompt in sending offers of help to the Scottish Federation, to whose lot so large a share of election work has fallen recently. The Treasurer of the Union appeals in another column for financial help. Let everyone remember how heavy a burden has been borne by Scotland, and do their part in easing it as far as possible.

Our Case Against the Government.

We must bring home to Mr. Asquith's constituents the facts concerning our case against his Government. The N.U.W.S.S. has issued at intervals (and notably in The Common Cause of February 13th and 20th) statements on this subject, showing how the Suffrage question has been mishandled in the House of Commons; how time was refused when we had a large majority behind us and the militants were observing a truce; how pressure was brought to bear on Liberal supporters of the Government to withhold their votes when time was given at last; how reports of threatened resignations, believed and not contradicted till the eleventh hour, frightened Nationalists and Liberals alike from our support. The "torpedoing" of the Conciliation Bill, and the breakdown of the Franchise Bill, introduced so late in the support. the session as to make the position when it was lost irretrievable, are also part of our case against the Government.

Our Case Against Mr. Asquith.

But against the Prime Minister himself our case is stronger II. It was he who pledged his word to Mrs. Fawcett that his Franchise Bill would be drafted in such a way as to admit of an amendment including women. It was he who, when he found that this pledge could not be redeemed, refused to see or talk with those to whom it had been given. It was he who subsequently declared to a deputation from the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress, in the face of all the facts, that his pledges had been literally fulfilled. He did not say, observe, that he could not fulfil them, and that this was not his fault. He said he had fulfilled—" literally fulfilled"—them all!

The Case Against Anti-Democracy.

Mr. Asquith goes to his constituents as the champion of Democracy and the rights of democratic government. He is no democrat who persists in disfranchising half the people. Every argument that Mr. Asquith has ever brought against Women's Suffrage is an anti-democratic argument. His speech in the last Suffrage debate in the House of Commons was pure anti-Liberalism. He said, in brief, that men had done well for women—or, in other words, that, in his opinion, "good government" is "a substitute for self-government." We deny it, even if (which is at least unproven!) the government has been good. We demand self-government. Will the electors of East Fife ensure it to us?

The Coming Campaign.

All the facts of recent Suffrage history, its mismanagement in Parliament, its broken pledges from the Prime Minister, will be found in a pamphlet to be issued by the N.U.W.S.S., giving chapter and verse for every statement, and quoting the words actually used by Mr. Asquith. The pamphlet containing a report of the deputation sent to him by the N.U., on August 8th, 1913, should also be in the hands of every Suffrage speaker and worker this week. and worker this week. Frankly, the record is such a scandalous one that many people refuse to believe it. Let them have chapter and verse.

Votes for Women in India.

In view of the alarm with which Anti-suffragists regard the effect of Women's Suffrage on our fellow-subjects in India, it is interesting to learn from the Morning Post (March 27th) that, according to Mr. E. B. Havell (author of "Indian Architecture "), evidence was available of the existence of town councils in India as early as the tenth century, of which women mi members, and even (so says the Morning Post report) "Juncia-of the Peace!" We shall have to hurry up if we are tonon level with our Indian sisters. Even now, women carck exercise all the functions of a J.P., though two women have b invested with some of their responsibilities.

Women Doctors for Public Health Work.

Three women doctors are being appointed by the L as members of the public health medical staff, at a sala £400 a year, their duties being the medical inspection of children. There are now, including the newly appointed ler to about a dozen women doctors engaged in this work, ancomwho are employed in the work of infant life protection. been understand that previous appointments have been made s.nisato the compulsory resignation of women officers on mar On this occasion, Dr. Scott Lidgett strongly opposed thianches rageous condition, but the debate was adjourned without any decision being arrived at before our going to press. We protest with indignation against these persistent attempts to penalise marriage. It is nothing short of a scandal that adult and responsible people should be subjected to such interference with

"Leave it to Nature!"

We publish elsewhere a report of the deputation to ected Haldane on the question of admitting women to the practithe law as solicitors. It will be seen that Mrs. Hum Ward was a member of the deputation. Is it too much to g on that she will lay to heart the words of the Lord Chancellor's the way should large to nature much large the light that the second sec we should leave to nature, not to law, the limitations of mot any All the sense of the Suffrage movement lies behind those wound, that Nature can be trusted altogether, and is therefore urg the Law Society to oppose the Bill opening the professiorese women. It is human nature, of course. It is the human nature that makes Women's Suffrage essential.

Starvation Wages.

A young woman was charged at Lichfield on March 2-th with stealing certain articles of drapery. She was a shale assistant, and worked from 8 a.m. till 7.30 p.m. For this shk received at first 3s. 6d. a week, and later 5s. Deductions 163 insurance, &c., sometimes brought her wage down to 1s. 6c She did not "live in," and at the end of six months, she—styl Mrs. Osler writes to the Birmingham Daily Post:-

"I happen to know that it was a woman, and through her a wor organisation, who saved this girl from ruin; who secured for he legal advocate who made so effective a use of the shameful facts ttee. sweated labour; a woman who held out to her on her dismissal the of a home and decent employment; a woman prominently connected the Women's Suffrage Movement, who was thanked by the Bench for eactive interest in the case."

We thank her, too, and perhaps we may be forgiven if we that this woman was Mrs. Kempthorne, the wife of the Biof Lichfield. Will other women who are too happy and tented to need a vote, ponder these matters, and ask themse whether women are really too well protected to need any codefence than the chivalry of men? Can chivalry, howeverGroup intentioned, avail at all in such a case?

Two Cases: A Contrast.

Julia Decies, convicted of the attempted murder ect had lover, has been sentenced to seven years' penal servitud to the refused leave to appeal. On Wednesday, March 25th, under Central Criminal Court, Edward Samuel Moyes pleaded ag into to the manslaughter of his wife by kicking her. Hads on received nine months' hard labour. Why?

How is It the Man Gets Away?"

In trying a case of indecency against a Kilburn woman, ick-S. Crone (Chairman) was informed that the man who when with her had escaped. Dr. Crone asked :-"How is it the man always gets away in these cases, and the poor woman gets caught?

The constable explained that the man escaped whilst he was showing him his warrant, which he demanded to see, as ent doubted whether he was a constable. He admitted that it 3£7 unfortunate that he escaped. "I do not call it unfortunasiest said Mr. Oliver. "Some other word is needed."

NATIONAL INSURANCE ACT.

the motion to go into Committee of Supply on the Civil

KINLOCH-COOKE (Devonport, U.) moved :-

hat, in the opinion of this House, the working of the National once Act shows that, while the cost to the State increases, the sheld out to insured persons are, in many instances, not forther, and there is reason to believe, in the near future, that the on will become more acute, and a still larger number of insured a will outfler."

e administration of the Act was severely criticised by I speakers, especially with regard to sanatorium benefit. Addison (Hoxton, L.) contended that during the short e sanatorium benefit had been in operation the Governt had done their best to provide accommodation. The diffiulties which had arisen with local authorities had not been con-ned to the machinery of the Act. MR. FORSTER (Sevenoaks, U.) was astounded that the Preident of the Local Government Board should claim that there s ample accommodation in the sanatoria for all insured rsons suffering from tuberculosis. If that was so, how came all the insured people recommended for treatment in Lorons were not getting it? The fact that the fund for the ce of sanatorium benefit had been depleted by the Governphr ented Insurance committees giving institutional treathor large number of persons who ought to have it. He thote cases of single-room families where the father was Mg his own children. That was a state of affairs of which pers in all parts of the House ought to be ashamed.

MR. H. SAMUEL said that the sum of a million and a half nds was being spent to provide sanatoria for the whole tlation, and not for insured persons alone. Much of the Commodation hitherto provided for insured persons was wedly of a temporary nature, and would have to be replaced. enty thousand persons had been treated in institutions, and thousand had received domiciliary treatment. It was not case, however, that all the latter patients were so treated ause there was not room in sanatoria or money to send them Domiciliary treatment was sometimes the best. Other akers maintained that the treatment of tuberculosis under the t was in many cases quite inadequate.

Mr. C. Bathurst (Wilton, U.) asked if the Insurance Comioners could not do something with regard to the provision killed nursing for insured persons, on the ground that it ld undoubtedly effect the more speedy and more certain ery of sick persons, and thereby result in a large saving ney, which is now being expended upon medical benefit, ore particularly upon sickness benefit. IR. HODGE (Gorton, Lab.), speaking as an official of an oved society, said he was conscious of many defects in the rance Act, but it had been of incalculable benefit to the -paid workers of the country. A great many societies, ver, found their funds were not sufficient to meet their onsibilities and liabilities with regard to women's sick-had hoped that the two Members of the Government who addressed ld have given the House some assurance on that point, that they not see the various societies bankrupted as a consequence of that by. The amount of sickness benefit which women get at the present is so small that, were the amount to be reduced, it would hardly having. I desire to press upon the Government the necessity g the House into their confidence, and telling us what they intend far as that particular feature of the Insurance Act is concerned."

March 27th.

FEEDING OF NECESSITOUS SCHOOL CHILDREN.

JOWETT (Bradford, Lab.) moved the second reading of Education (Administrative Provisions) Bill. The promoters, Dated, had three objects :-

1) To enable meals to be provided for underfed children during vacations; as it was found that needy children fed at school ved considerably in physique, but deteriorated when the schools

"(2) The abolition of the halfpenny rate; as in the poorer districts, where the rate yielded least, there were most necessitous children.

"(3) To extend the system of school meals to districts where the cation authorities had hitherto refused to act. There were 317 local tion authorities, and only 134 were doing anything to feed necessitous.

SIR F. BANBURY (City of London, U.), in moving the rejection of the Bill, said he realised that many children did not receive sufficient food; but he believed in what had been called the reactionary doctrine of the responsibility of the parent. The Bill destroyed that responsibility. The proper people to feed underfed children were the Poor. Law authorities.

MR. J. A. PEASE (Rotherham, L.) welcomed the Bill, and trusted it would be read a second time unanimously. But he did not think the time was yet ripe for compulsion. He would like to see a provision in the Bill which would enable the local education authorities to punish parents when they did not provide the meals requisite for their children. But experience, so far, in connection with the provision of meals, showed that there had been no diminution in the recognised feeling that a parent should perform his duty to his child.

"During periods of unemployment, when a great number of men are thrown out of work and are unable to provide meals for their children, we have found that the number of cases have gone up in which the authorities provide the meals, but as soon as they get back to work the parents, in a large majority of the cases, directly they can afford to provide meals for their children, although they have been accustomed to have them provided for them during the period of unemployment, take a pride in feeding their own children out of their own resources. I do not believe that the provision of meals for necessitous children has a pauperising influence, which is going to do harm in the future, if it is well watched and carefully administered."

Other speakers expressed sympathy with the Bill as a whole.

Other speakers expressed sympathy with the Bill as a whole, though objecting to certain clauses. The Bill was read a second time without a division, and committed to a standing committee.

STREET TRADING.

Restrictions on street trading, as contained in the provisions of Mr. Denman's Children (Employment and School Attendance)
Bill, were considered in Standing Committee.
Mr. B. E. Peto (Devizes, U.) moved an amendment enabling a boy of the age of fourteen-instead of the age of fifteen, as provided in the Bill-to continue to carry on street trading if he held a licence, and if he were lawfully engaged in street trading before the passing of the Bill. He desired to alter the age of fifteen to fourteen because the school leaving age was proposed to be fourteen.

MR. R. T. DENMAN (Carlisle, L.), and LORD H. CAVENDISH-Bentinck (Nottingham, U.) pointed out that street-trading was not only a blind-alley occupation, but frequently led to crime. In many parts there was plenty of demand for boy labour in other occupations. The amendment was lost by 21 votes to 5.

JULIA DECIES.

MR. W. THORNE (S.W. Ham, Lab.) asked whether the Home Secretary could see his way to recommend the remission of the sentence on Julia Decies, in view of her ill-health, and of the circumstances of the crime. The answer was in the negative.

MEN SUFFRAGISTS AND THE LIBERAL PARTY.

On March 25th, the Men's Liberal Suffrage Society came into being, with a membership of 250, and with indication of rapid growth to come. Its main object is to press for the adoption of Women's Suffrage, and with this purpose, it offers to Liberals an opportunity of meeting and considering the methods

Mr Dickinson announced that the Society will endeayour to bring Liberal policy back into that course which alone is consistent with Liberal principles-by giving women the vote. He urged the members present to work with the Liberal party, putting Women's Suffrage in the forefront of their programm A reference to the sincere attitude of the Labour party on this question was warmly applauded.

Mr. Acland explained that he, and some of the most influential members of the Cabinet, were unable to take their place as officers of this society at present, though they hoped that the time was not far off when they would be able to do so. He urged Liberals to remember that more could be done for Women's Suffi age by staying in the Liberal party than by leaving it; the party was suffering seriously by its failure to adopt Women's Suffinge, and therefore to fit this plank into its place in the offical platform was an act quite consistent with loyalty to the

Mr. Martindale, of the Liberal Men's Association for Women's Suffrage, said that in Manchester and the North of England they were astonished at the readiness and at the amount of the support received by their society. They had gone one better than Mr. Acland anticipated, for they had secured as their first President Sir John Simon the Attorney General.

The institution of this Suffrage Society of Liberal men, following close on that of the Union of Liberal Women, shows how anxious members of that party are becoming to secure the support of Women Suffragists.

LIBERAL MEN'S ASSOCIATION FOR WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE.

IMPORTANT SPEECH BY SIR JOHN SIMON.

Sir John Simon (Attorney-General) was the guest of the evening at a dinner given at the Manchester Reform Club on Saturday, March 28th, by the Liberal Men's Association for Women's Suffrage. Mr. Barton, M.P., was in the chair. Sir John Simon, responding to a toast, said that was a gathering of Liberal men who were all agreed in thinking that the creed of Liberalism led inevitably to a belief in the principles of Women's Suffrage. He came there not as a member of His Majesty's Government: that did not, however, absolve him from declaring that he was a believer in the cause of Women's Suffrage, and that the time had come when some of them who were Liberals ought to admit they had been a little too much disposed to allow that belief to be treated as a kind of personal fad, as though it was an idiosyncrasy in an otherwise well-regulated mind. practical people they ought to take the opportunity of viewing the position in which they stood, and of seeing what were the immediate prospects of that cause.

NEED OF A GOVERNMENT MEASURE.

Recent experience had convinced Women Suffragists that private bills for this purpose were really not likely to be effective, that they must organise themselves, and do all that they could to cultivate and promote public opinion, inside and outside the House of Commons, in order to secure that this question might be presented to the Legislature for them to vote ipon in the name of the electors of this country in a way which was more likely to lead to a more successful issue than the promotion of any private bill.

"That I understand to be the opinion of those who have studied the tactics of this question very closely, and I believe the view which they entertain is the right view, and I subscribe to it."

MILITANCY.

What was the position, what were the difficulties and obstacles in front of them now? In the first place, there was the obstacle which consisted in the preoccupation of Parliamenthe would go further, and say the preocupation of the Liberal Party-in other and older issues. Here, again, he wished to be perfectly candid and frank with his Liberal friends who were Women Suffragists. He took the view that as long as they had the problems on which they were now engaged to deal with and to solve, they had, in the circumstances of the case, a claim on the undivided support of the Liberal Party, which must be regarded as prior to the carrying out of their own Women's Suffrage proposals.

In the second place, there was the tremendous and forbidding obstacle of militancy, which was doing incalculable harm :-

"No one can exaggerate the harm that is being done from day to day in disturbing the judgment and neutralising the enthusiasm of constitutional Liberals which is due to this fatuous and wicked policy. But let us denounce with all severity the attitude of any man who uses these outbursts of militancy as a reason for disavowing the faith that is in him. We regret it, we deplore it; we are convinced that it is undermining, for the time being, the natural popularity which ought to attach to a reasonable cause which is sincerely advocated. But it makes no difference to the faith which is in us."

EFFECT OF AN ELECTORATE ANSWERABLE TO MOTHERS.

After a reference to the deputation which had asked the Lord Chancellor to promote a bill enabling women to become solicitors, of which he expressed approval, Sir John Simon called attention to an incident at the House of Commons on Friday, when the great majority of members left the House of Common when the subject to be discussed was the feeding of school children. If every member had felt he had to go amongst an electorate and be answerable to mothers and wives who were devoting themselves to the children growing up, this bill would not have been discussed in an almost empty House.

In concluding, Sir John Simon said they must do their atmost to see that women were no longer regarded as mere camp followers in the Liberal army, but that they should take their place, not as irregulars, or even as auxiliaries, but as fully enfranchised citizens, marching side by side with them in pursuit and the solution of which they were concerned in securing. It was a plain obvious deduction from the principles of Liberals themselves that the vote should be conceded to women.

EXPERIENCE OF COLONIES.

SIR VICTOR HORSLEY, in proposing the toast of the Association, pointed out that colonial experience disproved the common objection that the grant of the vote to women would check progressive legislation.

The N.U.W.W. and MRS, HUMPHRY

The National Union of Women Workers has sent a letter to members of Mrs. Humphry Ward's "Joint Consultative Committee," pointing out that the Union is doing, and has been doing, the work which Mrs. Ward has started a new organisation to do over again. The writers say :-

"This Union, of which the Queen is Patroness, has forty-nine Branches in England and Scotland, with 7,503 members, and has 1,582 Societies engaged in work for women and children affiliated to it.

Special Committees, and end:—

"The forty-nine Branches of the National Union of Women Workers are represented on these various Committees, and thus the experience of the whole country is brought to bear on the central bodies. Resolutions passed by the various Committees and by the Council of the Union at its annual meeting, dealing with a wide range of subjects, have been sent to the Government at various times. Deputations have interviewed Ministers and public authorities in connection with many matters affecting women and children.

"We would urge that it is in the interests of all who have the welfare of women and children at heart to associate themselves with the work that is already being done, rather than to run the risk of over-lapping and waste of power by starting a new organisation."

THE NATIONAL CARE OF MATERNITY.

On March 26th a meeting of the Fabian Women's Group was held at Caxton Hall to discuss "The National Care of Maternity and its Relations to the Amendment of the Insur-

MRS. SIDNEY WEBB, who presided, said that the subject had been brought to a point by a national crisis which related to the solvency of the Insurance Act. The approved societies under the Act that dealt with married women were rapidly going into insolvency. There was a deficit of about a million pounds on the societies and three quarters of a million on women's benefit societies-or as someone had worked it out, the scheme was going to the bad at the rate of something like 27s. a minute. Practically the whole of this deficit was due to pregnancy sickness. The great mistake that had been made was that the Government, when dealing with women, had not consulted women, and the consequence was they forgot there was such a thing as pregnancy, and so, as concerns women, there would be a deficit of a million and a half by next year.

Mr. Lloyd George's probable proposal to the Government franchised citizens, marching side by side with them in pursuit of causes which modern politics specially existed to explore, for each case of pregnancy. If you took this course, the easiest and cheapest, you were telling every married woman that it was to her interest to remain in industry until she had her baby. This extraordinary proposal would not be made if women were represented in Government. MISS MARGARET BONDFIELD, Secretary of the Women's Cooperative Guild, in the course of her speech, explained that about a million of women of the working class were excluded from the maternity benefit as they did not come under the Insurance Act; also, that the sickness benefit was conditional upon incapacity to work—it being left to the officials to interpret this statement as they chose. The result was that if the sick visitor found a woman washing up the tea things, or looking after her baby, she might be told she must declare off the funds. The women, in consequence, either went back to work too soon because they could not bear to sit and do nothing all day, or else they evaded the sick visitor. What a woman wanted was the right kind of work to keep her healthy. The approved society official was unfitted to deal with this question. With the coming of the maternity benefit the mothers had felt they could depend upon the money they would receive to be of real help to them, but the midwives and doctors had raised their fees and the women had been actually poorer through the maternity benefit. The scope of the Act was insufficient to meet the needs.

She advocated a municipal medical centre, with a woman doctor at the head, the State money to pass through the centre, and the pregnancy payment to be made by it to the women. They desired the services of thoroughly trained midwives, who would be expected to be consulted during the early months of pregnancy and who would watch over the mother, preparing her and keeping her in a normal condition of health, while if special treatment were needed the midwife should pass her on to the maternity centre. Then they desired the compulsory notification of births and stillbirths throughout the country, also some kind of guarantee and encouragement to the women to abstain from heavy work during the weeks before and after the birth of the child. They suggested a grant of £7 ros. for the birth of every child who came under the Act, to be made by the State. The plan was that the mother could have either 30s. cash at confinement, or 20s. cash and the free services of the municipal midwife; she would receive the remaining £3 10s. in weekly instalments before and after confinement. A fund would be formed with the money which remained from the total grant of £7 10s., and would be pooled according to the needs of the different cases. Lastly, the medical service should be co-ordinated that the child might receive sufficient care from its pre-natal days until it reached school. They wanted the Local Government Board to take this matter over, and an immediate grant was needed with which to form maternity centres.

EMANCIPATING THE CHAIN MAKERS.

Increase in the Minimum Rates.

A meeting of an unusually interesing character was held a few weeks ago in Cradley Heath. There has been peace in the chain industry since the great days in 1910, when, as though suddenly awakening from a stupor, the chain makers put down their hammers, with the determination not to pick them up again until they received the new minimum rates, the application of which certain employers in the trade were endeavouring to delay. How the women, helped by public generosity, won that memorable struggle, is now a matter of history; and its monument remains in the attractive Chain Makers' Hall, built for them out of the residue of their strike fund.

The new rates were given, but with foreboding-the trade could not stand the increased wages, and the women, so far from receiving better payment from their work, would be unemployed, and consequently without any payment at all. it was said. These croakings soon ceased, for the trade did not languish; it flourished exceedingly. Indeed, not enough workers could be secured, and the employers are now distressed that young people are not entering in the required volume. Is it wonderful that, under these circumstances, the representatives of the women pressed for an advance in the too meagre rates originally fixed for them? An advance of 10 per cent. was agreed upon, and the women assembled to hear the good news.

One who knew Cradley Heath in its Lenten days could not but be struck by the altered mien and spirit of the women. Poor, ill-dressed, marked by the rigour and want which was their constant portion, the chain makers in 1910 might have moved even the hard-hearted to tears. Of this poverty, there was at the recent meeting little evidence, better clothes being worn by women in better spirits and in better physical condition. Three years of trade unionism and of higher wages had made an stonishing alteration, and now another step in the ladder was to be climbed

Only one barrier was in the way. Some of the employers, as in 1910, were inclined to withhold the 10 per cent, as, under the Act, they are entitled to do, for six months, and the workers, whose courage is now high, were not in the mood to submit to the deprivation. A bold note was struck by the speakers, and eagerly cheered, and Cradley Heath seemed on the brink of further trouble. Happily, it is now blown over, and an arrangement made with the Employers' Association ensures the women, without any struggle, the practically immediate payment of their new rates. So Cradley Heath has again picked up its hammers, and is working with heightened zest.

WOMEN AS SOLICITORS.

On March 27th the Lord Chancellor received a deputation from the Committee for the Admission of Women to the Solic tors' Profession. The deputation was introduced by Mr. J. W. Hills, M.P., and amongst those composing it were:

Lord Robert Cecil, K.C., M.P., Sir Frederick Pollock, Bt., Mrs. Fawcett, the Countess of Selborne, Lady Emmott (representing the National Union of Women Workers), Mrs. Garrett Anderson, Dr. Jane Walker, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Miss Violet Markham, Miss Mary McArthur, Mr. G. Radford, M.P., Mr. J. W. Hills, M.P., Mr. J. J. Withers, Miss Bebb, Miss Costello, Miss Nettlefield, and Miss Ingram.

Mr. J. W. Hills stated that in consequence of the decision of the Court of Appeal that women were not admissible as solicitors, single clause bill had been brought in this year which was backed by members of all parties. He reminded the Lord Chancellor that he had himself appointed two women as Justices under the Lunacy Act.

After Mrs. Fawcett, Sir F. Pollock, and Lord Robert Cecil had spoken, the Lord Chancellor said, in reply, that he was strongly of opinion that they ought to leave it to nature, and not to the law, to determine what the disabilities of women were. Speaking for himself, he was entirely in favour of the principle of the Bill; as were also the Prime Minister and the Law Officers of the Crown, to whom he had spoken. Sir John Simon, who was a person very much concerned in the matter, was in sympathy with it.

He could not make any promise about Government time, because it was not in his power to make any such promise; but later in the session it very often happened, when there was a bill about which there was an approach to general agreement, the conditions became easy, and if they watched that situation, and kept in communication with the Attorney-General, he was sure they would find a sympathetic ear.

MILLWALL STRIKE SETTLED

The strike at the factories of Messrs. E. & E. Morton, at Millwall, was settled on March 27th, terms satisfactory to both employers and employed being agreed upon through the good offices of the Mayor of Poplar. These were:—

- (1) No present worker to be dismissed.
- (2) Present wages will not be reduced.
 (3) Young girls will not be employed on the drying process.
 (4) Young girls will only be taken on so that experienced workers
- ay be available at 18, and then only as vacancies arise; and (5) No present workers to be penalised on account of this dispute.

THE CASE OF MRS. ANNIE WILLIAMS.

Mr. Stanhope Bedding informs us that he secured 200,954 signatures to the petition for the release of Mrs. Williams, who was, it will be remembered, convicted of the murder of her child under very tragic circumstances, and condemned to death, the execution being deferred till after her confinement. As a result of the petition Mrs. Williams has received a conditional pardon, which means an early release, but not entire freedom. Mr. Bedding desires to thank readers of the COMMON CAUSE for their help. He has spent £6 7s. 8d. in the work, and has received £2 10s. 10d. towards it. We congratulate him on the result of his work, and suggest that those who are interested should help to defray this expense be sent to 195, Northdown Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

SUFFRAGE IN IRELAND.

APRIL 3, 1914.

A DEPUTATION AND ITS MORAL.

The deputation from the Northern Committee of the Irish Women's Suffrage Federation to Sir Edward Carson, reported in your columns of last week, was not as disappointing as it appeared at first sight. It was known already that Sir Edward is, and has always been, in more or less sympathy with the Anti-suffragists. It was fairly well known that some of the leading spirits in the Council of the Women's Ulster Unionist Association are of the same way of thinking. It was, therefore, something that the pressure of friends within the Unionist camp had induced Sir Edward, beset by interviewers of all possible descriptions, to see a deputation from the non-militant Suffrage organisation of Ireland, and that he definitely promised to give careful consideration to one at least of the points brought forward by the deputation—the demand that a referendum in the Ulster counties, if accepted, should be on the basis of the Municipal Register.

The moral of the whole was contained in one remark—that he could promise nothing, as his party was divided on the subject.

The moral is clear. Political leaders do not always lead; they sometimes follow. I wish to emphasise in the very strongest way that if promises from a leader are to be obtained, the party which he leads must be approached. Every local party organisation of every shade of political opinion, should be approached in order to secure a realisation of the strength of the Suffrage movement and the nature of the Suffrage demand. These are the two points which must be impressed on all political parties, and on all responsible for the working of the party machine, while at the same time it should be made clear that the Suffrage movement in Ireland is not allied with any party. In every political party now there is a Suffragist leaven. Our business s to help the growth of this, until the whole party is leavened. This prospect is not as distant as it might appear. There is another point. Everyone who has studied the events of the last week must have realised the enormous effectiveness of the passive resistance" undertaken by the Army. Whether this esistance were necessary or unnecessary, justifiable, or unjustifiable, is not my point. It was effective.

Now, in what ways can we women use this weapon of passive resistance? In the first place, we can refuse to do political work r political parties. That may seem an old story, but were I t liberty to tell all that has been involved in the history of the ast three years, I could produce fresh evidence in support of it. It is my deliberate conviction that the vote will be gained, not by making ourselves useful to politicians, but by refusing to do so. As long as we continue to do their work, they will continue to give us those fine words which butter no parsnips. In other words, I at least hold, though I speak for myself only, that no Suffragist should work for any party organisation. The refusal of a few capable women would do more to bring the Suffrage than will a score of successful meetings.

Lastly, let us make more use of that excellent institution, the penny post. If a party leader says something of which we do not approve, let us write from all the four quarters of the British sles to let him know the fact. Once upon a time, a Liberal Prime Minister advised a deputation of Suffragists to "make nuisances of themselves." Some of us think the advice was taken with a docility disastrous in its results. But at any rate, we might follow it to this extent, and pester the offending Minister by letters of remonstrance.

DORA MELLONE,

Secretary, Irishwomen's Suffrage Federation. [We have also received a communication from the Irish Women's ranchise League, in which militant action is threatened on the examples of Mr. Redmond in the past and Sir Edward Carson in the present."]

Studies in Freedom.

Everyone is familiar with the arguments-employed equally y timid and lukewarm supporters of women's emancipation as by its most hostile opponents-drawn from an imaginary picture of the effects that would accrue from that emancipation, once granted. From the possession of the right to vote, they pass, mmediaely and correctly, to the representation of women in Parliament. That done, they give the reins to their imaginations, and pour out, as facts well established, what these conjure up. The dodge is familiar to all who study actual politics, or political history. The mental process has been labelled, once for all, by the "wisdom of the nations," which speaks of "the wish being father to the thought.

Ad nauseam come the statements that, once equal rights with men are granted to women, we shall see disruption in the family, antagonism between men and women, husbands and wives; female voters and representatives swayed by sentiment; incapacity of political and legislative action and function; imperial questions imperilled or sacrificed to the sentimental prelilections of women for matters of more personal interest; men logged and hampered in the exercise of their deliberative and egislative functions by the presence of women and by the action of the female (read inferior) mind; and so on. The list can be almost indefinitely prolonged of statements like these, that have become a sort of automatic cat-call whenever the subject is broached.

Now comes a curious reflection. Countries exist, actually exist, where complete freedom for women obtains. In one, it has obtained for seven years, and material exists from which, once for all, the truth or falsehood of the above statements et hoc genus omne, can be drawn. It seems strange that none of those who employ these " arguments " should have thought of making these simple investigations. Or is it wisdom on their part? propose to try and discover.

By the reform in the representation of the people of Finland in 1906, equal rights were given to men and women on obtaining their majority. This was a natural political step after the social evolution which had already given complete social equality to women, in education, career, sphere and social activity and influence. A further natural consequence was the entry of women into the Finnish Diet, as Parliamentary representatives of the people. And, as in Finland, small as are the country and its population, there are at least four political parties; burning questions and internal economy and organisation; social and economic difficulties; and one imposing question affecting the very life of the country, viz., the question of its constitutional existence in face of Russian political aggression and encroachment-in virtue of all this Finland offers an object lesson of the first value for all who are interested in complete political equality for men and women, whether from friendly or from hostile motives.

At the last elections, twenty-one women were elected as members of the Diet, elected by men as well as by women. Of these, six are or have been teachers; three are journalists; one, a very able woman, quite self-made, has been a cook; two possess the high degree of Doctor of Philosophy of Helsingfors Uni-versity; one, who has been a worker in the field of economics and has published a good book of labour statistics, is a factory inspector; two are seamstresses; one is the wife of a peasant (i.e., a working farmer); the rest are wives of journalists or of working men. All have been, and are, active in some section of the fields of social and political service. That is surely a sufficient answer to the oft-repeated story of the incapacity of women in any general sense for political service, or to the fear that it is only women of the independent or leisured classes who are likely to apply themselves to politics. For here are represented all classes of society, to a much greater extent than they are represented among the male members of, say, the English

Again, of these twenty-one members, twelve are married, and three of these have their husbands also in the Diet, belonging to the same parties, though, as my informant from the Diet declares, they do not always vote alike. Another illusion gone! There is no justification here for the theory of the "raging spinsters" and the woman who is incapable of home life, as the only potential M.P. Finland's experience gives no support to those who cry that women with political rights will be less womanly than in a state of political servitude, or that the exercise of political duties is incompatible with the exercise of the duties of a house-mother.

Such an experience does no more than tally with expectations founded on common sense. But by way of support I add a few phrases from the careful opinion given by Senator Leo Mechelin, the "Grand Old Man" of Finland, on this very question.

APRIL 3, 1914.

"Women who have to bring up a family are so much the more capable of instilling into the rising generation the love of nation and fatherland, and of fostering in them a feeling of the duty of a common citizenship—than when they have no political rights or interest. And as for the relations of married life, a broadening of the sphere of common interest is a gain."

The April Magazines.

The Englishwoman has an important article on the political situation as regards Women's Suffrage, by "P. W. W." (Mr. P. W. Wilson). Its chief emphasis is on the fact that franchise reform (to which Liberalism is pledged) is absolutely impossible without the inclusion of women. "The policy of enfranchisement for men is as surely written off the Liberal programme as Women's Suffrage itself.

The position is thus stale-mate at Westminster, while the forces gain strength and discipline outside."

"Problems of the Day "deals with the hard case of the unmarried mother and her child, and gives an account of the Day Servants' Hostel, which is making an attempt to solve this question on novel and humane lines. In "Occupations of Women," C. E. W. Binney disposes of some errors in an article by Mrs. Colquhoun, appearing in the Nineteenth Century for March, and shows that "there has been a remarkable increase in the number of women following what might be called 'middle-class' occupations." The analysis of figures for this class is very interesting: for this class is very interesting :-

LORD SELBORNE'S SUFFRAGE BILL.

LORD SELBORNE'S SUFFRAGE BILL.

Madam,—May we appeal through your columns to all Conservatives who think that the demand of women for some representation in Parliament is not unreasonable, to give their support to the measure which Lord Selborne is introducing into the House of Lords. This Bill proposes to give the vote to those women who have already the franchise for municipal bodies. They have exercised this franchise with the general approval of their fellow-countrymen for the last forty-five years, and there is no doubt that they would use further powers entrusted to them by Parliament, with equal wisdom and moderation. They represent every class of the community. The majority of them are widows who have to face all the responsibilities of life. Their number will not permit them to exercise any preponof life. Their number will not permit them to exercise any prepon-derating influence in elections, but they are widely distributed, and will be able to put forward the alterations and amendments which men desire in the laws from a great many different points of iew. For the satisfaction of those who are nervous about numbers, re may say that the women enfranchised by this Bill would number bout one-and-a-quarter million, and there are now over seven million

It is much to be wished that the Conservative party could give some It is much to be wished that the Conservative party could give some satisfaction to the desire, so generally felt among women, for a share in the choice of Parliamentary representatives, and allay the discontent and unrest, which are such disquieting features of our time.

THE PROBLEM OF THE MARRIED WORKING WOMAN. REPLY TO CRITICS.

MADAM,-I am grateful for the interest shown by your corresondents in the views expressed in my articles. Their criticism is velcome and helpful; their objections and alternate suggestions may

(1) Disagreement with my view that the work of the wife of the rerage working man does not advance human progress.

(2) Disagreement with my view that the circumscribed work of the married working woman is not an inevitable condition.

(3) Disagreement with my view that it is a narrow sphere.

Suggested alternatives.
Fear of the results of changes on the lines advocated.

To take these in their order:—

(1) It would be easy and pleasant to take the view that the devotion to duty shown by the vast majority of married working women is advancing human progress. But nothing is gained, and much is lost, by blinking facts, and in this case, alas! the facts are all against this view. That which advances human progress is that which tends to make better people, and which develops sensitive social conscience. The facts are that social development goes on in spite of, and much more slowly in consequence of, the unconscious influence against it of the woman whose whole soul is absorbed in a personal struggle with primitive domestic jobs. I must repeat again a fact which scientists and sociologists have made plain; that we develop by that which we do; and it follows, as night follows day, that if our whole powers are engaged in the personal service of a little group of people in whom we have an exclusive interest, we shall inevitably be hampered with a mental outlook circumscribed by the personal as distinct from the social. Not till woman substitutes love of service in humanity's good (which would, of course, include the good of her own particular beloved ones), can we possibly have ideals of government which would, as a matter of course, subor-To take these in their order :clude the good of her own particular beloved ones), can we possibly have ideals of government which would, as a matter of course, subordinate the personal greed for wealth on the part of individuals, to the human needs of the people as a whole. We may not shut up half our people (and those the mothers of the whole people!) as "queens" of homes, and drill into them from babyhood upwards that their noblest duty to humanity is to devote themselves to the personal service of whatever little group of individuals they happen to be associated with by ties of blood or affection, without our having to take the consequences, which are, of course, the inevitable and injurious ciated with by ties of blood or affection, without our having to take the consequences—which are, of course, the inevitable and injurious despotism of the other half of the people who conduct the world's affairs outside (including the provision of homes for the queens).

(2) The fact that already a sufficiently large number of married women do not perform all the domestic jobs of their households, and are, nevertheless, happy wives and useful mothers, disposes of this objection. One correspondent points out that many working men hate their jobs. That is not news to a working woman who has lived all her life amongst working men, and who has suffered heartaches for particular ones on this same account. But working men have a little more choice than working women, after all, and they are not condemned, willy-nilly, to one occupation the moment they marry. Further, though it is admitted that much of the potential power and capacity for joy in work is denied opportunity of development in many of the sons of women, is that any reason why the potentialities (why of the sons of women, is that any reason why the potentialties (why not equally great?) of nearly all the daughters should be wasted?

(3) I suggest that the evidence of married working women themselves would be valuable here. I could supply reams, but may not for want of space. Yesterday, I heard a housing reformer (not an anti) state that one of the greatest obstacles to housing reform is the indifence and dislike to new ideas which characterises the married working woman—she who suffers most from bad housing conditions. We could not have much better evidence of the narrowness of her sphere, which, of course, reacts on her mental outlook, and prevents her viewing housing as a social and not as a personal matter.

(4) The only suggested alternatives are that endowment of motherhood is only meant as a temporary expedient, and should be accepted as such, and that working women should not marry at all. Both these alternatives come from a habit of mind which is the outcome of sex and class subjection. It is closely allied to the attitude of the anti-suffrage man who denies the humanity of women because they are not men.

Endowment, and consequent riveting of the idea in the mind of the working woman that personal dependence on somebody or something is inevitable, because she is a woman and a mother, may have to be accepted because we are afraid to do justice to the working classes as a whole, and are determined to keep them in subjection; but it is legitimate to point out the danger to their human development, which is the extent of my liability.

As to the other alternative—it greatly instructs and amuses us working women to find other women viewing us as though we were curious specimens of an alien race, and wondering why we get married! It therefore becomes necessary to explain to those women who "cannot understand the working woman," that we are animated by the same emotions as are other classes of humans. We are actually fond of our husbands and children, and would rather be married than single! It may be strange, but it is true. It cannot be argued, surely, that because we persist in accepting the disabilities sooner than deny ourselves the joy of mating and motherhood, that the disabilities must remain? They are of a removable nature, whilst the impulse to mate and to reproduce is not removable, and we may as well confine ourselves to the practicable.

(5) As to the fears of those people who dare not let the working woman have the same freedom as the rich woman has, they are quite groundless, owing to the fact that working women are human, just like other women. One of my critics is afraid that "essential mother love" will be missing, when wise mothers unite in demanding that all that combined wisdom and scientific knowledge and skilled care which the nature can offer, shall be at the service of every baby born; and she adds a praver for Heaven to defend us from this. Heaven.

all that combined wisdom and scientific knowledge and skilled care which the nature can offer, shall be at the service of every baby born; and she adds a prayer for Heaven to defend us from this. Heaven, or whatever else the reader may substitute, has already defended us from this, and prayers are quite superfluous for this particular object. There can be no weakening of the bond between mother and child, however wise we may become in child-care. The bond which alone made possible the survival of the human race in the dark days of the beginnings of its upward evolutionary climb, will not break now that another stee upwards has become inevitable. that another step upwards has become inevitable!

ARMED RESISTANCE

ARMED RESISTANCE.

MADAM,—In the courteous letter appearing in a recent issue, C.H.A.S. suggested that my comparison between the threatened militancy of Ulster and the militancy of the women suffragists will not hold. C.H.A.S. prefers comparing the Ulster man to a house-holder, defending his valuables "against a burglar who comes and tries to take them." May I point out here two very important distinctions? The house-holder of whom I presume C.H.A.S. to be thinking, acts legally the Ulster Coursetters are recently as the sufficiency acts. The house-holder of whom I presume C.H.A.S. to be thinking, acts legally; the Ulster Covenanters are prepared to defy all law, ready, as they say themselves (and as you observe in your "Notes and Comments"), to take "any action that may be effective" on their own behalf. If C.H.A.S. wants a comparison from burglary, let me suggest the aggrieved house-holder, who threatens that if the burglar's trial does not go in his own favour he will proceed to lynch law. The second distinction is that between Possession and Right. Unless we keep this clear, we may slip into the position of saying that any face may be used to keep a vote but none to win it. any face may be used to keep a vote, but none to win it.

THE MIDDLE-CLASS PATIENTS IN THE COUNTY ASYLUMS.

MADAM,—I think your correspondents, "A Non-Official" and "An Old Asylum Worker" lose sight of the fact that I was writing of the position of middle-class patients in these institutions more especially. From their point of view, there are County Asylums in which the ordinary patients appear to be sufficiently comfortable, reasonably happy, and recover satisfactorily; they are at least with those of their own class, and do not miss what they have never been accustomed to have: but, should not those of the middle-class, who are unfortunately obliged to come on the rates, have at least equal rights? The herding together of patients of different ages suffering rights? The herding together of patients of different ages suffering more or less severely from mental diseases causes needless suffering and discomfort to all-often physical as well as mental!-and i inhuman and cruel to each.

To those who have been "better born and bred," and are therefore more highly organised, this enforced contact must aggravate the conditions of life generally existing in these sad, prison-like hospitals, and be often unendurable

In Scotland, many of the public asylums are already giving the patients far more freedom and space, with the best possible results. There are few "bolts and bars," and the spacious grounds and surroundings are really used by the inmates themselves. May I ask the readers of The Common Cause to test for themselves, May I ask the readers of The Common Cause to test for themselves, by open enquiry and by visiting (not only upon the days appointed), the position of middle-class patients in our County Institutions.

"How it Strikes a Contemporary."

"It is felt that the Government has blundered in the most unstatesmanlike way; that the Opposition has subordinated patriotism to party opportunism; and that the Army has shown surprising signs of an unmilitary spirit.' Thus it strikes the contemporary who stands outside our party conflicts. . . That is the way justice is done at a distance, and this threefold verdict is, we imagine, substantially the opinion of all intelligent watchers in foreign countries."

Westminster Gazette, March 30th.

Many of the most sincere of our opponents are convinced that women cannot think imperially. It is for this reason, in fact, that they must not be allowed to interfere in imperial affairs. We wonder how the events of the last fortnight have struck them, and other "intelligent watchers" not only "in foreign countries "but also at home. To Suffragists it appears certain that no women politicians could possibly have made a more deplorable muddle than that which imperially minded men have made. We are now, it seems, on the brink of civil war. The Government, during the last few days, has apparently lost its senses; but the Opposition, in the most obliging way, presents them with an excellent election cry—"The Army against the people!" The Army, totally against its own inclinations, has been forced into the position of dictator. The Navy part of it at least-occupies its leisure in exchanging messages of the warmest friendship with the Ulster volunteers. We are reminded of a "strike" story of Miss I. O. Ford's, wherein she described to us in moving terms the sympathy of certain strikers with "the military" who had been sent to quell them on a biscuit apiece, and the anxious efforts of the said strikers to provide these fierce quellers with food and other comforts before the quelling began. The position becomes farcical—if it were not so serious. But farces played out on such a scale and with such interests involved, are liable to turn into tragedies before they end. Does anyone seriously believe that no way could have been found out of this muddle? Are we really to choose, as a celebrated author recently put it, "between being governed by mental deficients or criminal lunatics"? (We leave it to our readers to cast the parts.) For ourselves, we refuse to believe that honest statesmanship could not have saved us from making in the eyes of "intelligent watchers in foreign countries" the incomparably ridiculous spectacle we have afforded them this week: we are certain that it was possible to find—what was even more important—a way of compromise, not indeed welcome to both parties or either party, for it was already too late for that; but at least compatible with peace and honour. A little commonsense, a little respect for the convictions of other people-in a word, a little less of militancy—and this impasse might yet have been avoided.

What has really happened? After all, it cannot truly be said that intelligence was lacking. The leaders of the various parties in Parliament may not be men of commanding genius, but it would be absurd to say that they are without intelligence. How then have they come to act like "mental deficients"? Undoubtedly because they have been blinded by party feeling. At every step in the proceedings, it seems to the looker-on, the one thought possessing all has been how to make party capital of what happened. Ireland-Nationalist and Unionist-the Army anything and everything becomes a pawn in the party game. No wonder the game seems confused to the looker-on!

We recently received from a correspondent certain proposals for a solution of the Women's Suffrage question, in which it was assumed (somewhat rashly, it appeared to us) that women neither would nor could wield political power on party lines. This, it was held, made the grant of the vote to them quite impossible, since nothing could be admitted for a moment which was likely to imperil or to weaken the stately edifice known as our "party system." We question whether women will be so independent of party as our correspondent supposed; but that they will be more independent than men have at this juncture shown themselves we do believe, and we therefore demand their enfranchisement. Surely the pass to which party selfishness has led us must convince even the most ardent of party politicians that something is rotten with the system.

Enfranchisement may be very near to us, in spite of the absorption of political interest in the Irish crisis. There is a time in the life of a movement when a serious set-back (like the withdrawal of the Franchise Bill) or such a crisis as that through which we are passing, means a real subsidence in its vitality and force. But there is also a time when nothing can seriously discourage or delay it. To such a pitch of strength the Suffrage movement has attained. While Ireland has been convulsed with internal dissension, and all minds-it might have been thought-absorbed in one issue alone, the Suffrage movement has gone forward by leaps and bounds. For long behind Great Britain in organisation and numbers, Irish Suffragists are now making up for lost time, and exactly when it might have been expected that they would have no time or thought for anything but the question of the Union. During the recent Suffrage Week in Dublin, when civil war was already a recognised possibility, Nationalist and Ulster women sat side by side and discussed the means of winning their enfranchisement. Some, who were already training for Red Cross work if war came, were there. They were, and are, prepared to serve with the men in case of need: they were not the less bent on winning freedom for women. Doubtless they were more bent. They could not fail to feel equally with their fellow Suffragists here, but even more framatically, how infamously unjust is the refusal to let them share in decisions from which they are bound to benefit or to suffer equally with men. The men who wish-honestly wish very often-to shelter women from the hardnesses of life, can no more do so than they can shelter themselves. They decide: the women have to suffer if they decide wrongly, and no power on earth can avert that suffering. Women claim, then, the right to share in the decision since they must share its consequences. Nor will it be easy to persuade the most diffident of women in the future that they could not have exercised a little more common-sense, risen a little further above the consideration of pure party, than have on this occasion their imperially-minded

The Position of Widows Under the Poor Law.

II.

The object of my article last week was to show that widows with dependent children ought not to be under the Poor Law at all, and that Boards of Guardians are not the right bodies to deal with them. It makes no difference to this view whether the treatment of widows by Boards of Guardians is good or bad. A Board may be as progressive and Liberal in its administration as the Local Government Board's regulations permit. Its relief may be adequate in amount and well adjusted to each individual case. But the widow and her children will remain paupers all the same.

They will be regarded as dependents on the benevolence of the community; will be classed among the failures of society. This view of their position is fundamentally unjust, and bears no relation to the real facts of the case. If the widow is keeping her home and her children properly, she is carrying out her part of the implied marriage contract. She is not a failure because she cannot carry out her husband's part as well. It is he, if anyone, who has failed to keep his share of the bargain by maintaining his wife, and the children until they are old enough to look after themselves. But, unless his death has been a suicide, he can hardly be held responsible for it. It is, therefore, unjust to punish him vicariously for it by reducing his wife and children to the status of paupers.

theoretic than a substantial grievance. Questions of political or civil status when they affect men are very serious questions indeed, whether they arise as far off as South Africa, or as near home as Ulster. With women it is a different matter. It is worth while, therefore, to show that the position of widows under the Poor Law is not merely a question of status, but entails very practical evils.

The Majority and Minority Reports of the Royal Commission on the Poor Law are unanimous upon this matter. In addition to their own enquiries, they appointed three special investigators, Dr. Ethel Williams, Miss Longman, and Dr. Marion Phillips, to carry out an enquiry into the condition of women and children upon out-relief in a number of Unions, selected so as to be typical of the various centres of population, metropolitan, urban, and rural. Their results were published in Appendix Vol. 18 of the Commissioners' Report. This volume and the two main reports give between them an appalling picture of the conditions found in a large proportion of the Unions. The feature of the case which excited their strongest comments was the effect upon the children.

"Children who are brought up in the very midst of such conditions as we have seen, surrounded by disease, immorality, and drunkenness, are almost doomed to pauperism." (Majority Report, p. 152.)

The Minority Report is characteristically more expansive. "The saddest feature of all is that no small proportion of the 134,000 children whom, in the United Kingdom, the Destitution Authority elects to bring up upon Outdoor Relief— in the course of a year, probably, as many as 600,000 different children—are to-day without any interference by these Authorities, chronically underfed, insufficiently clothed, badly housed, and, in literally thousands of cases, actually being brought up at the public expenses in drunken and dissolute homes." (Minority Report, D. 770.)

These evil conditions are clearly due in part to lax administration, and in part to inadequate relief. The policy of the Guardians in the majority of the Unions is shown to be at once careless and penurious. They give something to everyone, and enough to none or few.

"The large majority of Boards still give wholly inadequate allowances, and rely upon the insufficiency of their inquiries for 'unrevealed resources.' If these resources happen to exist, all is well; if they do not, then the recipient inevitably suffers." (Majority Report, Par. 254.)

"The dole given is practically never adequate to the requirements of healthy subsistence. The sums awarded are always mechanically doled out, according as the R.O. reports the applicant to come into one or other wide category . . without any adequate ascertainment of the other resources." (Minority Report, I., 2.A.)

For the evils associated with lay administration, the Guar

For the evils associated with lax administration, the Guar dians are, of course, only partly to blame. The fault here lies mainly with the mothers. The Guardians' share of responsibility consists of their failure to insist that the grant of public money is made conditional upon the attainment of a certain level of good conduct and maternal care. If these conditions are not fulfilled, it would be far better to take the children into institutions. The reaction against barrack schools seems to have driven some Boards into the opposite extreme of regarding even the worst home as preferable to the best institution. But even the inefficiency of many of the mothers is obviously due in many cases in some degree to their inadequate resources. It is useless to expect energy and resource from a woman who is habitually underfed. It must be difficult even for a capable woman to keep her home and children nicely when every penny that is spent on soap and starch, on repairs and renewals of household gear, on clothing and boots, has to be cut off the weekly food or coal allowance. It must be hard to teach boys and girls good habits, or to "bring them up respectable," when they have to live under overcrowded conditions, in an insanitary slum, because the money set aside for rent will not pay for anything better

The investigators' inquiries showed that the incomes of widows on out-relief varied very widely, the lowest weekly income revealed by their researches being 2s., for a family in Liverpool, and the highest £3 is. 6d., for a family in Merthyr Tydvil. The medium for all the Unions investigated was 14s. 6d. "This sum, therefore," they say, "may be taken to represent the medium of income throughout the kingdom for all families with dependent children in receipt of out-door relief." In other words, one half the families of widows under the Poor Law enjoyed weekly incomes for all purposes varying from 2s. to 14s. 6d.

It should be remembered that the Report of the Poor Law Commission were issued some five years ago. It is natural to suppose that their criticisms produced some result on Boards of Guardians, and that many of them will have improved their methods of administration and standards of relief in the intervening period. The Liverpool Women's Industrial Council This, however, will be regarded by many people as rather a Boards of Guardians which bear sway over Liverpool and its neighbourhood, with a view to finding out what effect had been produced by the very severe strictures of the Poor Law Commissioners. The results showed that considerable improvement had indeed taken place in certain respects, mainly in methods of administration. There had also been a considerable rise in the scale of relief in one Union, and a slight rise in the two others. But the conditions are still far, very far, from satisfactory. Close inquiries were made into seventy-seven cases, taken at random from the three Unions. Two estimates were made out; one of the actual weekly income, and one of the minimum income necessary to keep the family in health. In calculating the latter a scale of living was taken considerably lower than that adopted by Mr. Rowntree in his famous book, and it was assumed that nothing was wasted and nothing spent on amusements, savings, fares, postage, or anything except the barest physical necessaries. The result showed that fifty-six of the seventy-seven cases, or $72\frac{3}{4}$ per cent., have incomes below the minimum necessary upon this extremely low scale.

The result of this grinding poverty upon the health and stamina of the widows and their children is much what might be expected. The Poor Law Commission's investigators calculated that there were in the United Kingdom approximately 51,900 mothers on out-relief, and that, assuming the thirteen Unions they studied were typical of the whole, 29,500 of them (or 51 per cent.) were in good ordinary health; 19,300 (or 34 per cent.) had no definite disease, but were weakly and ailing; and 3,600 (or 15 per cent.) were in definitely bad health. The children were pronounced to be on the whole "definitely and seriously suffering from the circumstances of their lives." "The out-relief boy of 14 is very little heavier than the average boy of 11.' "The out-relief girl, of 14 and upwards, in urban unions at any rate, is usually a weedy slip, showing none of the natural rounded curves, and with the hips of a child of 12." In point of intelligence, "the proportion of children classed as definitely below the average, if not mentally defective, is astoundingly large. The poorly nourished children are usually the dull ones."

Can anyone say that it is right or just, or in the interests of the community, that these "children of the State" should be suffering thus, merely because they have been deprived by "the act of God," of one of their parents, and because the surviving parent is unable to do the work of both? Widows under the Poor Law are an inarticulate race. They seldom complain, never write to the papers, and may not vote. They carry to an extreme that misnamed virtue of patience, which is so often a real crime against the community. But their wrongs cry aloud for redress, to those who have ears to hear them. They ought never to have been placed under the Poor Law, and certainly the so-called "Guardians of the Poor" have not as a body justified their name. It is high time that their charge should be taken from them and given to another.

ACTIVE SERVICE LEAGUE.

The formation of the League is going ahead well. The Manchester and District Federation held a most successful meeting to inaugurate their section on March 26th, when they invited me to explain the construction of the League, and the various methods of work carried out for the Leaguers. A Federation Section Leader was elected, a committee formed to carry out details, and all the members present were enrolled.

It is hoped that all the other Federations and Societies will follow Manchester's good example, and lose no time in organising their sections and groups. As one of the aims of our League is to enlist the interest and help of shop assistants in our work, I do strongly advise all societies to approach the shop assistants' unions in their respective towns. Miss Darlington has already done this in Manchester, with good results.

BY-ELECTION IN EAST FIFE.

THE PARTY OF THE P	THE RESERVE OF THE PARTY OF THE	A COLUMN TO SERVICE AND ADDRESS OF THE PARTY
	POLLING-DAY,	APRIL	15th.
Dec. 1910.	Mr. Asquith (L.)				5,149
	Colonel Sprot (U.)	100		100	3,350
			Lib. n	najority	1,799

The Scottish Federation is not letting the grass grow under its feet in this dramatic by-election. On the morning of March 31st its organisers entered the field. The ground is by no means new to them, for, in April and May of last year, a vigorous campaign was waged for a fortnight, during which thirty-four meetings were held in every town and village, nook, and corner of the constituency, amongst the speakers being Misses Robertson, Matters, Cooke, Dr. Lumsden, and Mrs. Aldersley. The Unionist candidate, Col. Sprot, has recently taken the chair at a Suffrage meeting in Leven, and is of opinion that tax-paying women might safely be enfranchised. Till his answers to our questions are received, we must suspend judgment as to his worthiness of support. The impression left firmly on the minds of the workers in the Fife campaign last year is that the Prime Minister's constituents, though opposed to militancy, are almost to a man in favour of the principle of equal suffrage.

The county is a difficult one to work, the population being scattered in small towns, villages, and hamlets, many of them inaccessible save by car or carriage. A good supply of motor cars will be indispensable, if we are to fly the flag as ubiquitously and effectively as every Suffragist would wish to do in the constituency of the Prime Minister. Who will help with money or with personal service?

The economic disabilities under which thousands of women labour will be illustrated by an exhibit of sweated industries arranged by the National Anti-Sweating League. May I appeal to all who possibly can do so, to volunteer to sell The Common Cause at the Woman's Kingdom Exhibition? I want to thank all those who are selling the paper already, and I earnestly appeal to others to give some time between April 3rd and 30th to this hard and trying, but most valuable work.

Treasurer's Notes.

The announcement of a by-election in Mr. Asquith's constituency is not the least sensational of the series of startling events of the past week. On accepting the office of Minister for War Mr. Asquith follows the usual precedent of offering himself to his constituents for re-election, and a by-election will take place immediately.

The responsibility of making the fullest use of this unexpected opportunity rests upon the National Union. It has been our task all over the country for many months past not to let the electors forget that the Prime Minister's pledges to women remain unfulfilled. The voters of East Fife more than any other section of the electorate must have our case against the Government put before them: once they have understood the monstrous treatment that has been accorded to the Women's Suffrage question in the present Parliament we can leave the issue in

The campaign is to be short, we must therefore concentrate our utmost efforts into the next two weeks; all our available forces, workers, speakers, and helpers must be put into the field, and to make the fullest use of this opportunity we must not be hampered for want of funds. The campaign will be organised by the Scottish Federation, and they will not spare themselves; we know how well we can rely upon their ability and devotion, and they look to the rest of the Union to back them up by sending to headquarters all the financial help that can be given. Meetings must be arranged without delay, committee rooms must be taken, and the whole campaign must be adequately equipped. More especially in an election of this character an immense amount of special literature will be required, and we appeal to our members to enable us to put into the hands of every elector full statement of the treatment by this Government of the Women's Suffrage question.

Our members will wish the National Union to be in a position to do full justice to the present situation. At least £100 must be available at once; the money will have to be spent almost immediately, and we beg all who can help us to lose no time in sending their donations. The more we receive the better shall we be able to do our work.

Literature Report.

The Editorial Committee of the Englishwoman has kindly given permission to the National Union to reprint the article by Lord Lytton, "Woman Suffrage: the only Way," in pamphlet form. We shall be glad to have the banners of as many Societies as possible carried in the procession."
