2 April 1911

My dear Pippa, Julia, who, laid up in bed recovering from a bad attack of parotitis, which prevented our starting for the South of France a fortnight ago, asks me to write to you for her. She has been immensely interested in Olive Schreier's book

"Woman and Labour"

which no doubt you have read. She expects you will agree with her in thinking that it ought to have a great influence on the cause, although the supra is only incidentally mentioned in it.

She wants to know whether the N. U. G. S. S.

is taking it up, with a view to obtaining it read by the greatest possible number of people.

Unfortunately the present edition is so expensive that few consequently few people will be able to buy it, and the circulating libraries do not of course reach everybody, or in any case rather slowly.

Would you let her know what you think in the matter?

The Podulini, Mount (N.Y.) has decided to form a small circulating library of suffrage literature and several copies of "Woman and Labour" ^{of which there} & have been promised by members as a gift. She does not know how far this library idea has been taken up by the branches. If it has not already been started, could not headquarters make the suggestion? There must be at all an expensive thing as the need of the literature is in pamphlet form and in the case of the more expensive works there will probably be in every branch at least 2 or 3 better off members who could give copies. This idea of course of this kind have to country houses, especially small ones, ~~where~~ where the members their selves need a great deal of education before they can hope successfully to educate and influence others.

I hope Aunt Jane is well
