Dear Lord Ebrington
Your correspondence
states with perfect
fairness the hardship
of the case of married women possessing what ought to be regarded as qualifications entitling them to vote in Municipal and Parliamentary elections.

But she probably knows, as your kindship doubtless does, that the disability exists at present
under the authoritative interpretation of common law, and the proviso in my Bill is only declaratory of what exists without the proviso

would be the effect of any such Bill
until the general
law is altered

Excuse this tardy reply. I have been much in Paris and otherwise exceptionally occupied.

Believe me, dear Lord
Abmiston,
Fithfully yours
W. Woodhall
