Florence.

2nd June 1877.

Dear Madam,

Your kind letter of May 11th was most welcome, for I have often wished for a line from you personally, having been very sympathetically impressed by your writings.

Your long illness grieves me, but now you are again able to work, I hope you will be cautious of that fatal source of over-work, which has cost so many noble lives.

Your idea of exchanging advertisements with foreign journals appears to me excellent. I will give you the address of a lady connected with the Cornelia, with whom you might communicate. Madame Lenini.

Viale Principessa Margherita 8.
Florence.

Madame Lenini is English, so you can write in that language. The editor, Madame Cirino, is at present, in Naples,

I send also a list of German papers, given me by a bookseller fresh from his own country. I think the "Nere Balnear" might suit you, also the German "Comelia" - &c.

A woman's paper "La Donna" appears in Venice, which might perhaps interest you. Let me warn you against a recent publication of the same title, printed in Florence in four tongues. It is a Jewish speculation & is poor in the extreme.

Last autumn I forwarded a sonnet for you, in a note to Miss Manning. I do not remember whether or not it was the one which I now give you, with the wish that it may please you. I shall be glad to contribute occasionally to the "Gazette" when I feel more settled. Just now, I am in a transition stage, contemplating a visit to Germany & various other changes.

Your noble enterprise has ever my heartfelt sympathy, and I wish for God speed in all your under"take. Let me again implore you not to overtax your strength. We need all the good women we have, & cannot afford to lose one - far less, so valuable a life as yours.
With true esteem, I am, dear Madam,

Faithfully yours,
E. Hadwin.

My address until Sept is as follows:
Höken Strasse. 21.
Homburg v d H.
Germany.
