Notes and Comments.

The National Union's Albert Hall Meeting.

This meeting will be held on the evening of February 23rd. Mrs. Fawcett, President of the National Union, will be in the chair, and the speakers will be Mrs. Philip Snowden, Mr. Lloyd George, and the Earl of Lytton. There are scarcely any tickets left, and if admission is desired application should be made at once to Miss Strachey, 58, Victoria Street, S.W.

Opposition, it is conceivable that they might defeat the Government. Neither the Labour Members who think the Govern-ment ought to have put women into the Bill from the first, nor the Liberal Antis who object to the Government giving fair play to a women's amendment, are in the least likely, however, to press their views at this juncture, since they will have opportunities later on of voting as they see fit without risking the life of the Government and the loss of the other measures which they wish to pass. The other amendment mooted is one to raise the whole question of the Referen-

The Great Labour Meeting.

In view of the determined stand which the Labour party is making on the Reform Bill, we hope members of the National Union and Suffragists generally will rally to the great demonstration which the party is having in the Albert Hall on Tuesday, February 13th, ten Tuesday, February 13th, ten days before our great meeting on the 23rd. At the Labour meeting Mr. Ramsay Mac-donald will be in the chair, and the speakers will be Mrs. Despard, Miss Mary Macarthur (Mrs. Ander-son), Miss Millicent Murby, Will Crooks, M.P.; J. Keir Hardie, M.P.; Arthur Henderson, M.P.; Philip Snowden, M.P.; and Mr. W. C. Anderson, Chairman of the I.L.P. I.L.P.

Rumour and the Women.

As we are going to press, the Cabinet, so we understand, is discussing procedure in Parliament this session with regard to Women's Suffrage. Before our next issue we shall know what is in the King's speech and what is likely to be the course of the debate upon Rumour fills the air. Even forecasts of the two great Government Bills, Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment, are not more numerous than the guesses, mostly inspired by individual desires, as to the fortune of the women's cause. We recommend to all our readers more than the ordinary grain of caution in believing Amendments to the King's Speech.

One of the current rumours is that the Opposition will challenge the Government by an amendment directed against the Reform Bill. Presumably the whole Opposition would vote against the Government on this occasion, and if the Anti-Suffrage members of the Coalition really felt indignant enough with Mr. Asquith for his pledges to the women to vote with the One Interest.

On the very next page, however, the Review proceeds to accuse "almost all Suffragists" of "sex-animosity," and proceeds to explain : "Suffragists cannot point to a single measure that has been passed of set purpose against the interests of women. But by far the greater part of the legislation proposed by women Suffragist speakers is designed of set purpose against the present position of men." We have heard an immense ence between the practical and the academic. The discovery will no doubt shock them."

would indeed shock us, and we believe it would shock every honest man and woman in the land if the men who have promised to vote for definite measures this year were to explain when the time came that their promises "academic." The An were The Antis, in effect, accuse the majority of Members of Parliament of number of suffrage speeches, and read an immense mass of Suffrage literature, and we have always found that the laws unjust to women were cited as instances of want of knowledge or want of sympathy, not of malevolent design. Further, we would point out that there is a bad non sequitur in the implication that because women would (as they undoubtedly would) wish to alter " the present position of men " with regard to women, the alteration must be against men. We believe that in the long run the interests of men and women are inextricably intertwined, and that the alterations which would be made in the law and its administration by men and women working together would be no less for the true interests of men than for the true interests of women. They cannot be made by men alone, because men cannot be expected to understand and feel everything any more than women can. .

In the Wrong.

While the Anti-Suffrage Review is industriously maintaining on one page that we of the National Union are fools for believing we have a very good chance on the Reform Bill, it declares on the next page that the W.S.P.U. has shown a " temperament wholly alien to politics and voting, and a com-plete inability to grasp a political situation," because they repudiated the Government offer as useless! Now, after all, whatever we may think of the attitude of the W.S.P.U. in this matter, they had the support of the Times, the Morning Post, Mr. F. E. Smith, and the Anti-Suffrage Review itself in their diagnosis of the situation. We find the Review very bewildering; it gives no clear lead for the enquiring mind; only one thing emerges out of the tangle; when men say a thing it is right, when women say the same thing it is wrong.

We are glad to note that the Review's report that Lady Jersey said "women really like to be rule" was incorrect; what she said was, "women like to be ruled." No doubt some women do.

The Campaign in the North.

The Antis seem really to have been having some open meet-ings in the neighbourhood of Manchester. On the 29th they had a meeting in the Rusholme Public Hall, where the chairman, Mr. Charles Hughes, declared the resolution defeated. On the 30th, at Hulme, the chairman declared the resolution declared. On the "a large majority." The reporter of the Manchester Guardian, however, says the hands held up seemed to be fairly equal on each side, and the chairman refused a count. On the 1st, in Levenshulme and Pendleton, the resolution was declared passed, in the latter place by a small majority.

Courtesy to Opponents.

The conditions under which the Anti-Suffrage demonstration in the Albert Hall is being conducted are of the most stringent. Only "bonâ-fide Anti-Suffragists" are to be admitted, and even they will be required to sign a pledge not to disturb the meeting. We greatly regret that there should ever be any justification for holding meetings with closed doors; it is a sign that some people have not yet emerged from a rather primitive condition.

No reasonable speakers mind moderate interruption, and we think the Antis are unduly sensitive, but we would appeal to Suffragists not to do anything seriously to disturb our opponents' meetings. Because we have in our time had to endure the extremes of brutality at our meetings, that is no reason whatever for retaliating now that we are winning all along the line. Let us show the Antis at least civility.

The Policy of the W.S.P.U.

In the current number of Votes for Women, it is reported that Mrs. Pankhurst said in a speech at the London Pavilion on January 29th :--- on January 29th :---"We have come to a stage when sympathy is no longer of any use. If Woman Suffrage is not in the King's Speech, we have to make it absolutely impossible for the Government to touch the question of franchise. If we have made a mistake in the past, it is that we have not militant enough.

In the leading article in the same issue Miss Pankhurst writes, Our point of view is that if we cannot unite the Cabinet on Votes for Women, the next best thing we can do is to split the Cabinet on Votes for Women." But there is a third alternative which Miss Pankhurst has not faced.

Women's Suffrage and the Referendum.

At a meeting of the Women's Suffrage Campaign Joint Committee (of which Mr. Arthur Henderson, M.P., is chairman, and Mr. Walter Rea, M.P., is hon. secretary), held on January 30th, the following resolution was moved by Mr. Arthur Henderson, M.P., seconded by Mr. H. G. Chancellor, M.P.,

FEBRUARY 8, 1012.

mittee, representing most of the large Suffrage Societies, protests against the proposal to single out the question of Women's Suffrage for sub-mission to a Referendum, and would regard this as an attempt to set up an unprecedented constitutional barrier to the will of the people as up an unprecedented constitutional barrier to the and the popular expressed in the House of Commons, and calls on all friends of women's enfranchisement to offer to it their most strenuous opposition."

Dr. Jevons Contests West Marylebone.

We are glad to hear that the West Marylebone seat on the London County Council, vacated by the resignation of Miss Susan Lawrence, is to be contested by a woman. Miss Jevons is a doctor, a relative of the late Professor Jevons, and a niece of the late Mr. Taylor, of the Manchester Guardian. She is keenly interested, as one would expect, in questions of public health, and she stands as an Independent.

Death of Miss Wordsworth.

Old students of Lady Margaret Hall will be sorry to have heard the news of the death of Miss Wordsworth, who had been Principal for thirty years. She retired in 1909, and was succeeded by Miss Jex Blake, a niece of the pioneer of medical women in England.

Death of Miss Straker.

Suffragists have lost a staunch friend and good fighter within the Liberal ranks in Miss Florence Straker, Secretary of the Hornsey W.L.A. It is reported as one of her feats that she opposed a nominee from headquarters because he was an Anti-Suffragist, and secured his rejection by the Selection Committee in favour of a Suffragist. If only all Liberal women had such grit!

Changing the Social System.

Bishop Gore has shown himself time and again to be a Churchman of great heart and wide sympathies. He made a warm appeal last week to the Christian Social Union to leave ' and his mere salvage work and "change the social system," appeal was to women as well as to men. There are, we believe, thousands of men ready to respond to such a summons. It has always been held women's work to bind up the wounds and help the vanquished in the stricken field; doubtless they will still do so, but with the growth of knowledge has come to many women a sense of untried power and the will to use it. know not whither it may lead us, but we are filled with hope and faith that when women's constructive powers are informed and liberated there will be a change in social conditions the like of which has not yet hitherto been seen.

Medea.

A fine performance of the "Medea" of Euripides was given in Professor Murray's translation at the Kingsway Theatre on the 5th by the "New Players." Miss Adeline Bourne played Medea with the right venom of hate; sere and wasted and Medea with the right venom of nate; sere and wasted and shaken with tormenting rage, she played the part with a certain monotony—one missed the awful transitions from pity to the terrified cry: "Down, down, thou tortured thing !"—and, finally, to hate again; but she truly gave the impression of nature blasted by wrong and warped to evil by evil. In th "Trojan women" we have the extremity of cruelty an wickedness endured unmurmuring by women at the hands of men; here the falseness of the man who took all and requite all with callous treachery is resented with a savagery that appals. It is usual to find a reconciling and soothing qualit in the submission of Andromache and only horror and dissatis faction in the revenge of Medea. But do we all feel this? A any rate, Euripides makes us feel how the caged, enslaved woman has no refuge, no outlet, no resource but to rag against unfaith and cruelty till she goes mad. From the first wonderful speech, when Medea surveys a woman's life ar what it is, to the dialogue with Jason (most excellently acted b Mr. Philip Merivale), when the callous egotism and impend trable conceit of the hero are like fuel to her rage, we see event shaping the awful end.

A New Dramatist.

The new play, "Rutherford and Son," which made such favourable impression when it was produced at the Cour Theatre on February 1st, is by a woman, Miss K. G. Sowerby The Times critic said the play told its story "with quit unusual force and conviction. Some of the scenes are a ingeniously and finely dramatic as could be imagined . is a play not easily to be forgotten and full of promise for the future, as well as of merit in itself.'

It reach its Third Reading without women in it, the is not difficult to see why. Working men know a good deal more than rich men about the lives of women, and they

SEE HOW THEY SUFFER.

They depend also very much more than richer men upon the sense and hard work of their womenfolk and they

RESPECT THEM ACCORDINGLY.

A rich man is very likely to think he prefers an idle and luxurious woman who will be the head of his establishment and wear handsome clothes and do him credit, and the only part he likes her to play in politics is to make herself pleasant to those who can get him into Parliament or find him jobs. And some of the women themselves live such sheltered lives that they have no real idea how hard the world is for the poor, and as they don't want anything changed, they don't see that others They recognised that the women had worked do. You will notice that the anti-Suffragists are

RICH OR TITLED PEOPLE.

The working people know how much Government interferes with the lives of the poor. Working men see that the laws which make a woman pay more or less for her sugar and tea, settle how her children shall be educated and doctored, interfere with her power of earning a livelihood and decide the age of consent, the punishment for prostitution and the conditions of marriage and parentage are after all as much as a man's, and the labouring men-all honour to them-have been the first political party to say they will not be tempted or bribed by an advantage to themselves if it will mean the further postponement of justice to women. They do not say that they will take nothing less than votes for all women but they will not accept a Reform Bill containing no provision for the women.

Our Work in the Parties.

At the present stage in our fortunes it is almost impossible to overrate the importance of getting into close touch with members of Parliament, candidates, and local party organisations, and this, as far as possible, through people of standing in the constituencies themselves.

We Suffragists, who care so intensely for our work, who have for years made every change in the situation, every ministerial pledge, every fresh sign of the times our particular interest and study, can scarcely, perhaps, always realise how little the average politician knows about our demand, its history and meaning. When we come to think of it, however, it is plain that this must be so; if politicians cared and knew as much about the voteless as they do about those who have the power to give or withhold votes, our chief need would be gone. is a fact to be faced with courage and resolution, that politicians are naturally far less interested in our question than in men's questions, and that we have to expend infinitely more time in keeping our question to the front, and in explaining and educating than has to be given for any questions in which voters are primarily concerned. This is unjust, but a tough moral fibre, a really chastened and finely tempered will, an informed and accurate mind will find a better and more permanent method than raging and exasperation in the steady, unflagging educaour masters," in the unintermittent presentment to tion of them of a great wrong unrighted, in the reasoning which leaves no obscurities, in the public propaganda which slowly but surely stops all avenues for the pursuance of a policy of shuffling and delay

We met recently with a case so common that there is scarcely a Suffrage worker who will not have met its counterpart. may be cited as a type. A young candidate in the Liberal interest was speaking at a public meeting, and declared himself in favour of the enfranchisement of women; the Conciliation Bill met with his approval, "but I understand," he added, that the ladies were not satisfied with that, and are asking for more, and I frankly tell you that if they are determined to wreck the Government then—I am a Liberal first!" The ridiculous side of this wonderful piece of political sagacity is what first strikes one. That we Suffragists, who were all absolutely united for two years upon the Conciliation Bill, which was opposed by the most powerful man in the Liberal Cabinet because it did not "go far enough," should be lectured by a Liberal candidate upon the mistake we were making in endea-vouring to "wreck the Government" because we were asking toc much, has indeed its humours, and we think it would be as well if politicians could occasionally see themselves absurd in women's eyes; it might stimulate their intelligence to condescend to women's questions at least so far as not to show themselves ludicrously ignorant. It is difficult, again, not to allow power to help us should be so ill-informed that what goodwill they have is useless for the removal of our disabilities. But we must beware lest indignation, lest laughter even hinder us from applying the true remedy, which is patient, courteous instruction.

FEBRUARY 8, 1012.

We have recently had a fine example how a "scare" can be manufactured by the Press within twenty-four hours. There may be nothing, at first, more serious behind such a scare as may be nothing, at first, more serious behind such a scare as the Referendum scare, got up by the Westminster Gazette lately, than an ingenious politician pulling wires to see how he can make the puppets dance. Some newspaper, with its own ends to serve, discovers that "the feeling in the country" is such and such, and predicts untold disasters if the Cabinet does not immediately take to its heels and flee from the wrath to come. If those whose interests are menaced are alert and watchful and well informed, no harm is done; the scare may even be turned to good, since all scares are signs of weakness. But if those concerned are inert, weak, or ignorant, they will be the victims of the gathering momentum of panic, and their cause may be set back for a generation. We Suffragists have a great principle, one of the greatest; we hold to it unshaken, and we consistently apply it; therein lies our strength. Now comes the question how this principle can be made to keep and increase its pressure in the party machines.

Our question is a non-party one, but this does not mean that we should have nothing to do with party organisations; since politics are in England worked through party, it is important to have the party organisations as well informed and friendly as possible, and the concentration of women on the question of their own enfranchisement may effect what the vote does for party questions. We have for 45 years pursued a steady educational propaganda in the matter of the political enfranchisement of women, and during the past six years this propaganda has taken on an increasingly political nature; now that the issue is actually to be fought out in Parliament this session, we must see to it that our methods are political, and we cannot afford to neglect the party aspect. If the average man is still disappointingly ignorant about our question, the party man is even more ignorant (since he concentrates on party questions merely), and the professional politicians, the agents, the local chairmen and secretaries are the most ignorant of all. They do not come into contact with women, politically, to any great extent, and those they do work with are the active party women who put party first. How should they know much about the Suffrage question? They tend to avoid anything that will split the party ranks; they don't want to find points of agreement with their adversaries; they would prefer to suppress discussion on matters on which they are divided. It is for us to force the choice upon them. Insistently and persuasively we must induce them to see the choice ineluctable at last, and themselves unmanly and discredited should they continue to evade it.

How is this to be done By the same methods which attained such enspiriting success with the City Council. All the great towns in the United Kingdom have, through their local councils, declared for the Parliamentary enfranchisement of women. Nothing is more significant of the deep hold which we have obtained on the common sense and business ability of the country. This result was attained by local work, by canvassing and explanation, and by appealing to all that is best in men; when this appeal is made by men and women who are known and respected for their work and reputation in the district itself, proves irresistible.

The organisation of the National Union is particularly adapted to this kind of work, because the leaders have always believed in this kind of work, and have steadily shaped their organisation for it. It is the work of our societies, spread like a net throughout the country, to bring local forces to bear upon the local representatives and powers. This work must be prosecuted with increased vigour, intelligence, and tact during the coming months. Members of Parliament and candidates must be told what has been done and what is yet to do; local political associations must be induced to take up a definite attitude on a question which is to be decided in Parliament this very session; political agents must be plied with information and evidence, selection committees must be watched, and Anti-Suffrage candidates discountenanced. These men know next to nothing of our movement; they are too busy with their own. They do not come to Suffrage meetings, nor to Anti-Suffrage meetings; if they did, they would be shrewd enough to estimate the relative values of some of the votes taken by either side.

This is our work, and no one will complain that there is too little of it ! Because of our voteless condition we have to work ten times as hard as the men. But then we care ten times as much. It is our task to make them care, too.

FEBRUARY 8, 1912.

The Slump in Referendum Stock.

Those who carefully watch the signs of the times on the Women's Suffrage question were aware a week ago that there was what I may describe as a slump in Referendum stock. The beral newspapers which had advocated with ardour a Referendum for Women's Suffrage became silent, or talked "shoes and ships and sealing-wax and cabbages and kings." The Times correspondent had another brilliant idea, viz., that it would be possible to defeat Women's Suffrage by another dodge, and solemnly put forth (Times, Monday, January 29th, 1912) the monstrous absurdity that it was not competent to the House of Commons to add a clause enfranchising women to the Government Reform Bill; it was suggested that such a clause should be ruled out of order as "not relevant to the Bill as read a econd time." The writer had apparently never heard of Mill's Women's Suffrage amendment to the Reform Bill of 1867, nor f Mr. Woodall's similar amendment to the Reform Bill of 1884, nor of Mr. Asquith's promises repeated in 1908, 1909, and 1911 that the Government Bill should be drafted so as to admit the possibility of introducing a clause enfranchising women, and not necessarily on the same terms as men. So desperate seems the light of the Anti-Suffragists that they catch at the most elusive of straws in their struggle to reach dry land.

If there had been a reasonably good hope of "dishing the omen" by means of the Referendum, the extraordinary hantasmagoria that it was not competent to the House of ommons to add a Woman's Suffrage clause to a Reform Bill ould never have been developed in the fertile brain of our dversaries.

But although the Referendum plot has been exposed, and is probably no longer a serious danger, I think it will not be with-but its uses to lay before the readers of THE COMMON CAUSE he reasons which justify us in calling upon the Government as Government to oppose the singling out of Women's Suffrage or the application of the Referendum. I do not now refer to he almost unanimous condemnation of the Referendum by Liberal leaders and the Liberal Press-that Mr. Asquith said the adoption of the Referendum would "strike a blow at the very foundations of representative government" and would degrade the House of Commons, and that for his part he would not remain a member of an Assembly whose functions had been mutilated and truncated in that fashion; that the Lord Chancellor and Mr. Lewis Harcourt stigmatised it as designed to give undue power to wealth; that Mr. Winston Churchill described it as "a bad and vicious system," and alluding to Mr. Balfour's offer to submit Tariff Reform to a Referendum. he had now found an opportunity of pushing it back into the rubbish heap from which it ought never to have emerged. These picturesque words no doubt suggest the attitude of mind for Women's Suffrage because it gives us an opportunity of pushing it back into the rubbish heap from which it ought never o have emerged "! All this is edifying and enlightening, but does not justify a charge of breach of faith, even if the Government supported a Referendum on Women's Suffrage. But I maintain that if the Government, as a Government, fails vigorously to oppose the application of the Referendum to a Women's Suffrage amendment to the Reform Bill, will be guilty of a distinct breach of faith, and for the following reasons :- On November 17th the National Jnion of Women's Suffrage Societies laid before Mr. Asquith four distinct questions bearing on the Parliamentary situation as modified by the announcement of a Government Reform Bill. One of these questions was "Will the Government regard any amendment enfranchising women which is carried as an integral part of the Bill, and defend it in all its stages?" To this Mr. Asquith replied without any qualifica-tion whatever "Certainly." I feel that this binds the Government as a Government, and not merely the friends of Suffrage in the Government, to resist the Referendum and the placing of further impediment in the way of the success in all its subsequent stages of the Women's Suffrage amendment. If carried, it becomes part of the Government Bill, and must be defended by all the resources of the Government. I am aware that on various occasions Mr. Asquith, notwithstanding his passionate denunciations of the Referendum, has said that he thought it might with propriety be applied to Women's Suffrage; but that only strengthens my case for believing that, as he said not a word on November 17 about a Referendum, and replied to our question by an emphatic affirmative, every obligation of honour and honesty compels him to abstain from giving any countenance whatever to the application of the Referendum to any Women's Suffrage amendment to the Reform Bill.

His answer on November 17th was of material importance in nfluencing the policy of the National Union. If he had qualified his affirmative answer by saying that before adopting Women's Suffrage amendment as part and parcel of his Bill he would require the further sanction of a Referendum, we should not have accepted his pledge as worth anything whatever. he did not say this, and he cannot add a condition now which he did not impose upon us then. In the summer Sir Edward Grey assured us that the offer then made by the Government with regard to the Conciliation Bull was a genuine opportunitty, and not a bogus offer. It will be a bogus offer, and will cover the Government with indelible disgrace if the promises of November 17th are not fulfilled in the letter and in the spirit.

This is a matter on which all the Suffrage Societies and, it is believed, the Women's Liberal Federation are absolutely united The difference between us is that the Women's Social and Political Union from the first attributed no value whatever to the Prime Minster's assurances of November 17, whereas the other large Suffrage organisations accepted them as of great and material value. We await with confidence the issue, which will show who was right. M. G. FAWCETT.

Who is My Neighbour?

Mrs. Eadie is one of my neighbours, and a dear friend. She is the mother of six children and the wife of a seventh, who is more trouble to her than all the rest put together. She came up to see us the other evening. Her special friend was at a committee meeting, but Mrs. Eadie waited in the hall till she came out.

' Could I speak to you a minute, Miss Connor?''

"Oh, Mrs. Eadie! Good evening. What is it? Not Eadie again, I hope?"

No, Miss Connor, it's not. It's- Could I speak to you a minute?

This request for a private interview being granted, Mrs. Eadie followed her friend into the office and began.

"You see these children, Miss Connor? How old should you say they was?" She pushes forward two tiny scraps that her friend had not before noticed among Mrs. Eadie's ample skirts. "They do look small and thin. What is the matter with them?'

"Well, A was coming to tell you. This one's eight, and the older one's eleven. It's bin going on for long enough—the whole street knew about it, and at last A could bear it no longer. A set the Cruelty man on them, Miss Connor !" This with calm triumph.

"You never did ! Splendid !"

"A did that, Miss Connor. And went to th' Court and gave ma evidence. A've browt th' children back, too. The little one, she's not as big as our Mary Alice was at two. And that thin ! Look at her little arms. Like bits of stick. And the mother, she got a month. Ee, Miss Connor, she's a real bad woman, that ! The way she give 'er evidence, an' all. I don't know 'ow she cud stand up there! The things she said, t'would make you blush! Why, the p'liceman 'ad to 'ide 'is face be'ind 'is 'elmet—A seen 'im! They lived next for five months, and the screams—I just couldn't stand it ! "What about the father?"

"Out o' work, 'e was. 'E got a month, too. And what I come about, Miss Connor, can the little ones come with our Mary Alice to th' party Saturday? She'd look after them proper, she would, and they've never bin to a party, have you, Ee, Miss Connor, the sores they had on them ! You oughter seen them a week ago ! Wait till I show you. (Faint protest from her friend.) Well, they're better now, but this little one, I doubt she won't be fit for much.

"Certainly they may come to the party, if Mary Alice looks after them. I'll give you two tickets. How is Mary Alice?"

Ee, Miss Connor, she's fine. And we had a letter from our immy. He's going on splendid. Ee sent his love to you, Miss onnor. T'was 'is birthday Monday, and t'master gave 'im a 'alf-day, and 'im and th' other lads they went into th' town, and 'ad their photografts took on postcards. A browt it to show you, Miss Connor. 'Tis fine. 'Im in 'is best suit, an' all. Sixteen, 'e is."

"It's very nice indeed, Mrs. Eadie. Just like him. And the other boys, too. What is the name of this one with a mis-chievous face?"

"Ee, our Jimmy, 'e says 'e's a fair treat. Our Jimmy wrote me a beautiful long letter, Miss Connor-A thought A'd bring it along. She produced the letter in a well-thumbed envelope, and handed it to her friend, who received it with every mark of H. G. Barclay (chairman of the Young Liberals) has reminded pleasure. Mrs. Eadie sat watching her with beautiful motherly

"Ee, Miss Connor, you're that bonny in that blue dress, I just have to keep looking at you!" All our friends make per-sonal remarks to us, as is the Lancashire custom, but our Irish-Lancashire friends make specially agreeable ones, such as " Ee, A do like to see your homely face ! " Mrs. Eadie continued.

"E fair made me wild last night. 'E said our Jimmy ought to come home and be put to something where 'e could earn more and live at home. 'So's you could lie in bed all day,' I told 'I know you, Thomas Eadie,' A says. And him bringing nowt in since last week, as you might say. A was washing up th' pots after tea, and 'e was that warritting, A was proper A picked up th' tub with all th' pots in, and fair angry. drownded 'im

"You don't mean it, Mrs. Eadie," says her friend, who can hardly keep a straight face. "What had he been doing?" "Ee, Miss Connor, you don't know what it's like. 'E's not bin working since Friday was a week. Says 'e feels tired. An' stopped in bed till I took the clothes off. 'So do I feel tired,' I says, and proper tired I am, been in the p'lice court all day, waiting for case to come on. And then to have 'im talk like that about our Jimmy."

"Well, at any rate he's not been drinking lately. And he is a kind father, not like that awful man you were telling me about.

'No indeed, Miss Connor. 'E's that fond of the little girls. Why, when that man I've told you about was round after our Maggy, 'e fair went mad after 'im. Went for 'im with 'is belt, an' all. Played 'Amlet with 'im. 'E's a good father when 'e's not on the drink. But some men are awful. There's that Rooney, now, I told you about them, Rooneys that live in Lucy Street, you know. Well, when 'e was out last winter, League of Help gave them a quart of milk a day for the children; their Maggy was proper sick, an' all. Well, what do you think Rooney did, Miss Connor? Th' milk people told League of Help. He used to fetch it 'imself, get out of bed and go for it alf dressed, 'e did, and drink it on the way back! And 'is children starving! But don't you ever let on as I've told you, Miss Connor. The people at the milk shop told, and it was stopped, and 'e swore 'e'd do it on them ! "

How awful ! And so the children got no milk either way. Well, what's going to happen to these children?"

Their aunt's keeping them while the mother comes out. They're going to her as soon as she can fetch them. She lives in the country, out Stockport way, an' it'll be better for them there. They can stay with me till she comes. Well, goodnight, Miss Connor."

Well, but, Mrs. Eadie, what'll happen to you when the father and mother come out? Won't they be very angry with

Mrs. Eadie drew herself up with dignity. "A'd like to see them," she said. "Th' whole street knows about them, there's not one woman in it would listen to them. Nor a man. They 'll not come back to Ada Street "

"Well, but, has Eadie lost his work through staying away like that? What'll you do if his master won't have him back?" 'He'll think it was the strike. 'E's gone back to-day. The pots done it ! "

"I'm glad to hear it. I think his master is very long-suffering. But shall I give you an order for some milk for these little ones? What did the doctor order them? "

"It's all right, Miss Connor. Th' Cruelty doctor's seen them, and they gave me an order for them.

Well, if there's anything I can do to help, you know, you must let me know. Clothes, now. Have you some of Mary Alice's you can use? I might have something." "It's all right, Miss Connor. They won't need much."

Evidently Mrs. Eadie meant to see this affair through herself. Good-night, Miss Connor. Say good-night to the lady, love.

"Good-night, Mrs. Eadie. Good-night, little ones." E. W.

Macclesfield Liberal Association and Women's Suffrage.

The chairman of the Macclesfield Liberal Association, Mr. Harold Whiston, has just given an instance of the way in which some men find it possible to apply a unique code of political morals to their dealings with the question of Women's political morals to their dealings with the question of Women's Suffrage; whilst on the other hand, the action of Councillor membership of the Liberal Association.

us that there are other men ready to make real sacrifices for the omen's cause.

On the agenda paper for the annual meeting of the association. on Thursday, January 25th, was the following resolution (of which six weeks' notice had been given) standing in the nameof Councillor H. G. Barclay :-

That this meeting of the Macclesfield and District Liberal Association approves of the extension of the Parliamentary franchise to women, and desires that the Government Reform Bill should be amended in committee so as to include women in its scope, and that copies of this resolution be sent to the Prime Minister, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Colonel Brocklehurst, M.P."

Before the resolution was moved, Mr. Harold Whiston was re-elected chairman. He then announced that, were the resolution carried, he should resign. He gave as an excuse that the passing of the resolution might split the association, and cause members to resign; and further, that town councillors would be placed in an unfortunate position, since, if they voted against the resolution, they would expose themselves to the opposition of women at the polls.

The effrontery of this remark, in face of the facts that the resolution was proposed by a councillor and seconded by an alderman, and that in April last the Macclesfield Town Council passed nem. con. a resolution in favour of Women's Suffrage, is staggering.

Mr. Barclay persisted in proposing his resolution, and Alderman Frost seconded it, but they withdrew it, since it was obvious that under the chairman's threat a fair vote could not be expected. As Mr. Barclay said, the resolution had now become a vote of want of confidence in the chairman.

Mr. Barclay (who besides being chairman of the Young Liberal Association is one of the most active Liberal workers and speakers in the division) has, however, made an effective protest by resigning his membership of the Liberal Association, and we reproduce his letter of resignation for the inspiration of other men who may find themselves in a similar position.

Exchange Chambers, Macclesfield

January 30th, 1912.

My DEAR HASTINGS,-The action of Mr. H. W. Whiston at the annual meeting of the Liberal Association has placed me in a position of great difficulty.

Let me briefly state the position.

Women's Suffrage is not a party question. The Prime Minister—a strong Anti-Suffragist—has decided that the question of Women's Suffrage shall be left to the unfettered judgment of the House of Commons. He has further intimated that if a Women's Suffrage, amendment to the Reform Bill be carried the amendment—once incorporated in the Bill—will be defended by the Government. The Prime Minister's action is admittedly taken in the interests of party unity.

action is admittedly taken in the interests of party unity. Some six weeks ago I gave notice of a resolution in favour of the principle of Women's Suffrage to be moved by me at the annual meeting of the Association. In order that the members might not be taken by surprise I desired that the resolution should be included in the circular surprise I desired that the resolution should be included in the circular summoning the meeting. At the annual meeting Mr. Whiston announced —before accepting the chairmanship to which he had been re-elected— that his acceptance of the office depended on the defeat of the resolution in favour of Women's Suffrage. His statement that his action was taken in order to avoid a split in the party is surprising. Had I imitated the example of Mr. Whiston I should have announced that the defeat of the resolution would mean my resignation—a course I never thought of resolution would mean my resignation—a course I never thought of dopting. Mr. Whiston's position is contrary to that assumed by the Prime Minister

With all respect to Mr. Whiston I am inclined to think the Prime Minister a better judge of the course likely to promote the unity of the party than Mr. Whiston. A resolution in favour of Women's Suffrage was passed by the National Liberal Federation on May 19th, 1905, by an overwhelming majority on the proposition of Mr. Leif Jones, M.P., seconded by Sir Percy Bunting. I wonder what would have been thought of the action of the President

I wonder what would have been thought of the action of the President of the Federation had he announced that the passing of the resolution would entail his resignation? Had Mr. Whiston announced that unless the resolution were passed— instead of defeated—he would not accept the chairmanship, my objection to his action would have been just as strong. His action—in my judgment—is contrary to the spirit and letter of the Prime Minister's advice to the party. It is a denial—in effect—of free discussion of the question of Women's Suffrage by the Liberal Association, for the approval of Women's Suffrage must now entail the resignation of the Chairman. It is, further, the creation of a dangerous precedent which cannot fail to have an unfortunate effect upon the free discussion of important questions of the day by the Liberal Association in the future. No member will care; after my experience, to propose any resolution

No member will care, after my experience, to propose any resolution involving a question of political principle lest the Chairman should announce that the acceptance or rejection of the resolution will involve his resignation.

FEBRUARY 8, 1912.

Perhaps you will be good enough to read this letter to the Executive Committee at their next meeting. Yours very sincerely, (Signed) H. G. BARCLAY. I should add that my adherence to the Liberal Party is not affected by action or my belief in its principles weakened. It is because I believe that those principles have been violated that I npelled-most reluctantly-to retire from the Liberal Association. shall not in consequence feel able to attend the meeting at the Drill 11 to be addressd by the Solicitor-General under the chairmanship of Whiston.

THE ALBERT HALL MEETING.

The Albert Hall meeting, to be held on February 23rd, w oubtedly be an enormous success. Already practically tickets are sold, and nearly every society in the Union ing representatives. The boxes in the hall have, as far sible, been allotted to the affiliated societies; but the dema far exceeded the supply, and some of the societies have seated in other parts of the hall. A special scheme of untry. procession last June will also be used on this occasion.

The Referendum scare has now more or less subsided in the oration is being arranged by the Artists' Suffrage League, Press, and anti-suffragists are casting about for some other ich will emphasise the national character of the Union by luding the names of the affiliated societies in all parts of the barrier to defend them from the passage of a measure of Women's Suffrage. The Times correspondent hits upon the Many of the beautiful banners which were carried in ingenious suggestion that a Women's Suffrage amendment to Many inquiries have been received as to whether the National the Reform Bill might be ruled out of order, quite forgetting nion is demanding a signed pledge from ticket-holders not disturb the meeting. We are demanding no such pledge; that Mr. Asquith had given the National Union a pledge that the Reform Bill would be drafted so as to admit of Women's Suffrage amendments. Mrs. Fawcett's letter to the Times the e meeting is a public meeting in the full sense of the word, we anticipate no disturbances. Those Suffrage Societies following day gave this suggestion its quietus. Other rumours have been set afloat to the effect that it is the intention of the ose policy it has been to interrupt the speeches of Cabinet Government to withdraw the proposed Reform Bill, and substilinisters have never disturbed the meeting of another Suffrage tute for it a Bill to abolish plural voting and certain electoral anomalies. Probably little attention need be paid to this report, Society, and we do not expect them to do it on this occasion. he distasteful expedient of demanding signed pledges has, but it is well to be prepared for all eventualities, and societies erefore, not been resorted to, and in adopting this course the lational Union has the consent of Mr. Lloyd George. All the in the National Union are urged to keep the Conciliation Bill tewards will be women, and it is hoped that the meeting will well to the fore, and to remember what has been constantly ow that suffragists can hold a genuinely public meeting such insisted upon-that the pledge of time for the Conciliation Bill is of the utmost value in all our negotiations. Moreover, in all the anti-suffragists do not venture to attempt. A large and representative platform is expected. The follow-g is a list of members of the House of Commons who have probability the second reading of the Conciliation Bill will come on before the Reform Bill, and it is of the greatest importance that we should be able to show a large majority for it, with far accepted platform tickets :no falling off from the splendid majority of May 5th last year. It is unnecessary further to insist upon the importance of deputations to members of Parliament, but Societies and Federations which have not made their arrangements are reminded of the importance of doing so at once.

To invite members of Parliament to speak at such meetings. For this purpose a list of speakers will be drawn up. 4. To devise means of carrying on the campaign in rural constituencies and rural parts of constituencies where the sitting member is an anti-Suffragist or doubtful Suffragist, and where large public meetings would be insufficient or impossible. 5. To give the representatives of Societies an opportunity of periodically meeting each other and their Parliamentary friends at Political Associations and the Vote.

May I suggest to Secretaries of Suffrage Societies that this is about the time of year at which Political Associations are holding their annual meetings, and that if these bodies are to be asked to pass resolutions in favour of Women's Suffrage, there is not a day to be lost in doing it. The Associations of many county constituencies have only one meeting in the year at which all the local Associations are represented. A formal letter to the secretary of the Association is often not enough; societies should study the lists of members of such Associations; ascertain the date of their next meeting, and secure a mover and seconder of the resolution. A personal canvass of the members is often worth undertaking, as many of them understand strangely little of the present situation of the movement.

ELEANOR F. RATHBONE.

Press Department.

Press Department. As the time approaches for the assembling of Parliament, and the "silly season" draws to a close, sanity gradually returns to the Press, and we hear only faint echoes of the hysterical outburst of a week or so ago on the subject of the "Referendum" and the "Cabinet Split." A few papers, however, still make spasmodic efforts to revive this fagrantly spurious agitation. On Saturday, January 27th, the Pall Mall Gasette rather over-reached itself in its cartoon. The situation is indeed full of hope when to such an avowedly hostile paper the Women's Suffrage Movement presents itself as a flood covering all the land. (We toontry did not want votes for women.) But in picturing Mr. Asquith up a tree, with the rain pouring down, stretching out his hand for an unbrella in the shape of the Referendum, the Pall Mall is surely revealing a shortness of memory which is regrettable in a political organ. Less than two months ago. in his interview with the Anti-Suffragists, on December 14th, Mr. Asquith made it clear that he fully realised the factoring against the rajof papers in all parts of the country which are detoring a certain space regularly to the Women's Suffrage. This week we have to report the Cheltenham Examiner and the factoring a certain space regularly to the Women's Suffrage.

news, and the Hants and Sussex County Press, which gives us a column every week.

The Standard had a whole column on the 29th January describing the London Society's demonstration at Richmond. In the same issue appeared nearly a column of preliminary notice of the Anti-Suffrage demonstration at the Albert Hall. On February 2nd appeared a good report of an important speech by Lord Robert Cecil in East Grinstead. The "Woman's Platform " is now inviting leaders to write on the present political situation : Mrs. Humphrey Ward on the 6th. Mrs. Fawcett was interviewed on the 5th; Mrs.

The Methodist Times will next week have an article by Mrs. Fawcett, and proposes to conduct an energetic campaign in aid of constitutional suffragists.

Literature Department.

The National Union wishes to make the Albert Hall meeting on February 23rd the occasion for getting a very large amount of suffrage literature into the hands of the general public. There will be a great many new publications, and it is hoped that everybody present will buy largely and afterwards distribute among friends. The London Society, which is organising the meeting, will provide many sellers; it is, however, leaving the organisation of the literature sales and the profits accruing from them to the National Union Literature Department.

As there is already so much work in connection with the neeting for London members to do, I should be very grateful f members of other societies who are staying the night in London, or who live near enough to get back that night, and are willing to help in selling would very kindly write to me as soon as possible

The new leaflet on "Women's Suffrage and the Referendum "has some very interesting extracts from the speeches of Mr. Asquith, Mr. Lloyd George, Mr. Winston Churchill and other Ministers. Their opinion of the Referendum, as "un-democratic," "unjust," "degrading to the House of Commons," "one-sided," and "designed to give power to wealth "i is go also fur stated in the state of the thouse of wealth " is so clearly stated in these extracts that they ought to prove most useful for distribution among those who are mistaken enough to think that the Liberal Government could consent to a Referendum without stultifying its own position and altogether dishonouring itself. The price of the leaflet is 6d. per 100 and its number B 41. The Women's Liberal Federation has published extracts from Mr. Lloyd George's speech on Women's Suffrage at Bath and from his speech and that of Sir Edward Grey at the Suffrage meeting at the Horticultural Hall. These can be obtained through the National Union.

THE COMMON CAUSE.

Treasurer's Notes

This week our receipts have almost reached £1,400, out of the £10,000 needed at headquarters for the year's work. The most important part of that work will have to be done now, or at least within the next two months. It will, therefore, be seen how urgent is the need that our year's income should be in hand promptly if the great campaign is not to be checked for want of funds

I hope the Albert Hall collection will help very materially, even if it does not bring together the whole sum, but I cannot forget that many gifts intended for us on that night will be earmarked for some particular Federation or Society, or for the work of our London Society. If, therefore, we can complete our first £2,000 in hand before February 23rd, it will be a great satisfaction to us all

Who will help? Has anyone thought of starting collecting boxes? Many supporters who are not rich, and happen to be prevented from coming to the Albert Hall demonstration, may be glad to contribute in this way to the collection, through friends. They are often too shy to send in the small sums which are all they can afford, and which they would gladly have given if they had been at the meeting.

The little sweetmeat boxes in the colours would surely do for the purpose, without the expense of making boxes specially for the occasion.

West Midland. SEVERAL DEPUTATIONS. DEPUTATION FO MR. W. C. BRIDGEMAN, M.P. (Os-westry Division). The Oswestry Branch, having worked up a strong representative Deputation, was received by Mr. Bridge-man on January 19th. Miss Mickleburgh, Head Mistress of the High School, introduced the Deputation and asked for Mr. Bridgeman's support for Women's Suffrage in the coming session, and several others spoke a few words on the various reasons why it was all-important that women should have a voice in legis-lation. Mr. Bridgeman replied very fully. He was opposed to universal suffrage either for men or for women—in the past he had voted or paired for the Conciliation Bill, but he refused to give any pledges a to what he would do in the future. After a further question from Miss Mickleburgh as to a Women's Suffrage amendment to the Reform Bill, Mr. Bridgeman said that, if that bill passed it would be far better that some women who had a stake in the country should be included in it. He ended by assuring the Deputation that its claims would be considered by him. Miss Morrison, our organiser, reports that the follow-mg members of Parliament have received deputations :----T. C. WEDGWOOD (L) Newcastle-underLyne. Promised to support amendments to Reform Bill including married women also to vote against the Bill if women were not included ; will support the Con-ciliation Bill. FORMATION OF A SOCHETY AT NUXEATON.
It is delightful to report another new society which has come into being chiefly through the hard work and organising capabilities of the West Midland Screttary Miss Coyle. A most successful public meeting was held, when officers and Committee were elected.
West Boownen.—On January 10th a cottage meeting was held, when officers and committee were elected.

Mr.'Lyell, in his reply, expressed his inability to agree ith the speakers in their demand. He considered that the catchword 'No Taxation without Representation' " derred not to individuals, but to communities. If it "the catchword' No Taxation without Representation"" referred not to individuals, but to communities. If it could be proved that the laws were unjust to women, "he would do his best to have them remedied." He approved of the Municipal Franchise, but would exclude women from foreign affairs on the ground that they are "more emotional than men," and therefore "more liable to war fever." He considered the Referendum a suitable means of ascertaining the feeling of the country on a question of such transcendent importance, on which the Cabinet was divided, and which, being unique, would not create a precedent. He believed that it is going to lower the condition of women." For that and other reasons he regarded the proposed reform with "the greatest misgiving." A vote of thanks to the electors of South Edinburgh and to Mr. Lyell was passed on the motion of Mrs. Cargill Knott.

TATION TO G. P. COLLINS, ESQ., M.P. (Greenock). The Greenock Society has devoted a good deal of time and perseverance to forming the deputation for an interview secured with their Member, Godfrey P. Jollins, Esq. The delegates were Mrs. D. Kerr, Miss Fortey, Miss Lang, Mrs. S. G. Taylor, Mrs. Laurie, Mr. Robert Kerr, and Mr. John McNeil. Mrs. Laurie placed before Mr. Collins a statement of the many developments which have taken place since Mr. Collins received their last deputation in October, and was assured of his deep interest in the question, of his chivalrous attitude towards women and his intention to consider their cause. From January 30th to February 5th I have been engaged at Port Glasgow, where a memorial has been set on foot to Mr. W. G. C. Gladstone, the member for Kilmarnock Burghs, who, two months after his election joined the Anti-Suffrage Deputation to the Premier, and is announced as one of the platform party at the anti-suffrage Demonstration in the Albert [Hall on February 28th.

Considerable sympathy has been shown us at the schools, at one of which five teachers joined our Society at once. One of the head masters gave some interesting reminiscences of Scottish suffrage meetings in the early seventies, and spoke with great admiration of Miss Lydia Becker, and of her editing of the Women's Suffrage Journal, which he used to review for some local

 A good deal of the Federation's January work has been reported through the month by Miss Crompton and proves how steadily suffrage sympathy spreads in Scotland; the Edinburgh by-election campaign has also received mention, but the fuller details given here in the Edinurgh society's work during January, with the capital reports from other societies make a good beginning to a strenuous year.

reports from other societies make a good beginning to a strenuous year. The KILMARNOCK Society's record includes an account of an anti-suffrage meeting on December 7th at which the sympathy of the audience was manifested so evidently towards suffrage that a resolution was not ventured upon; also a very successful social on the 19th, well attended by members and friends, who were entartained by a suffrage dialogue, music, and a racy speech from Mrs. Brown, the delegate to London. A canvass among women householders is being taken-results, which seem so far very favourable, are not yet summed up. The society-still in its youth-begins the year with 64 members.

INFERLETTHEN is another very young society which may be congratulated on the energy and enthusiasm that have steadily increased the membership roll during the month. The work of the society has been centred lately on organising a public meeting for February 1st. The PERTH Society held a very successful jumble sale on Saturday, January 20th, when a sum of £6 was realised. At the monthly meeting in the Grand Hotel, on the 22nd, Mrs. J. Hunter, secretary of the National Vigilance Association, gave an address on the work of her society. Miss Greenhill Gardyne, in proposing a vote of thanks, hoped that a branch of this association would be formed in Perth.

Two Deputations. Mr. T. Richardson, M.P. for Whitehaven Mr. T. Richardson, M.P. for Whitehaven (Lab.) received a representative deputation on Saturday, January 27. The deputation was introduced by Councillor Wandless (Liberal candidate for the Borough in January, 1910), who spoke of the support for Women's Suffrage amongst the men of Whitehaven. He was seconded by Councillor Hanlon (Miners' Agent) and accompanied by Councillor Woodnorth, Councillor Thompson and Mr. Nicholson. Miss I. C. Brown (Hon. Sec. of the Whitehaven Women's Suffrage Society) put forward evidence of the rapid progress of the Women's Suffrage Women's Suffrage Society) put forward evidence of the rapid progress of the Women's Suffrage cause in Cumberland, and Miss Norma-Smith (N.U. Organizer) gave a summary of the growth of the movement in the country generally, and the reasons why the question is urgent. Miss C. E. Marshall (Chairman of the North-Western Federation) asked Mr. Richardson the six questions drawn up at the Special Council Meet-ing in December, adding a seventh on the Referendum. Referendum.

Referendum. Mr. Richardson's replies to them all were entirely satisfactory. He will do his utmost, both inside and outside the House, to secure the enfranchisement of women on the widest basis which the House will accept. He said that if all attempts to include women in the Reform Bill were to fail he should vote against the Bill on Third Beading, as the only advante protect men Third Reading, as the only adequate protest men can make. In that case he would support the Conciliation Bill even if it were proved to be contrary to the interests of his Party. He said he should strenuously oppose the suggestion of submitting Women's Suffrage to a Referendum and would regard such a step as a violation of the Prime Minister's pledges to the Women's Suffrage Deputation in November. The deputation expressed their appreciation of the atting the later of the step of the the attitude the Labour Party is maintaining on this question, and thanked Mr. Richardson for his support in the past and his whole-hearted promise of support in the future.

In support in the pass and in the international promise of support in the future. Mr. Moulsdale, Liberal Candidate for West Cumberland, received a deputation on Saturday, January 27, consisting of Mr. H. Bonney, M.A., of Egremont, Miss Shanks (Hon. Organizing Sec. for West Cumberland), Miss Norma-Smith and Miss C. E. Marshall. Mrs. M. Jones and Mr. J. Laidlaw of Frizington, Mr. Carr of Cleator Moor and Mr. Gilbertson of Egremont would also have been present, but it was impossible for them to get to Whitehaven at the hour fixed. Mr. Bonney introduced the deputation and spoke in support of the principle of Women's Suffrage. Miss Shanks summed up the evidence of local support, and Miss Norma-Smith and Miss Marshall also spoke. Mr. Moulsdale said he had only been formally chosen as Liberal Candidate the night before, and had not expected to have his responsibilities brought home to him so his responsibilities brought home to him so promptly. As he was not in Parliament he could his responsibilities brought home to him so promptly. As he was not in Parliament he could not pledge himself to any definite line of action, but he declared himself a warm sympathiser with the Women's Suffrage movement, and after some discussion he gave much more satisfactory assurances than he was willing to give at the last election, when he refused to promise support for any measure for enfranchising women short of Adult Suffrage. He now says he "would certainly take half-a-loaf if he could not get the whole." whole.

The following day a committee meeting was held at Mrs. Chapman'sand the following officers were elected :--Mrs. Chapman (president), Miss Dixon (treasurer), Miss Florence Walker (hon. secretary). We hope the new society will do very valuable work, as it is the only society in the constituency, and the Member (Mr. Grant) has not, up to the present time, viewed our suffrage cause from the right point of view. The great and growing interest in our movement that is to be seen all over his constituency may bring about valuable results.

He was strongly in favour of the enfranchisement of women occupiers. He gave an unhesitating "Yes" in answer to the questions whether he would vote in favour of an amendment to the Electoral Reform Bill on Conciliation Bill lines, and whether, failing the inclusion of women's suffrage in the Government Reform Bill, he would vote for the Conciliation Bill in all its stages.

West of England. Deputation to Mr. Agg-Gardner. On January 31, Mr. Agg-Gardner received a deputation from the National Union, the Women's Freedom League and the Conservative and Unionist Women's Franchise Association. His replies were not altogether satisfactory from the National Union point of view. Mr. Agg-Gardner would not object to the application of the Referendum to Women's Suffrage, provided that the opinion of the women municipal voters that the opinion of the women municipal voters were also taken. His voting on the "Norway" amendment would be influenced by the consideration that under the Reform Bill 13,000.000 men would be placed on the new register. CHELTENHAM. We had a strenuous week in Cheltenham from January 22nd to the 31st. The society arranged three drawing-room meetings, all of which were very successful, and, besides that, Miss Robertson and I attended a debate on women's suffrage in a working men's guild, where, after a good discussion, the Suffragists carried their point by an overwhelming majority. There was also a joint demonstration held on the 30th ult., with Sir John Cockburn in the Chair, and Mrs. Philip Snowden and Mr. Glyn-Jones speaking. A good report of this meeting appeared in the Standard.

DEGANISATION IN THE CHORLEY AND BLACKPOOL

DEGANISATION IN THE CHORLEY AND BLACKPOOL CONSTITUENCIES. Very considerable progress has been made during the last month in the North Lancashire Constituencies of Chorley and Blackpool. The almost feudal Con-ervatism and real fear of new ideas has made it up-hill work. The Chorley Society is just about to affiliate to the National Union, and its first piece of work is the organisation of a deputation which Lord Balcarres has onsented to receive. I am afraid that some of those who have consented to go on the deputation do not ee their way to anything broader than the Conciliation Bill solution, but if they can convince Lord Balcarres that is constituency is ready for that, and can persuade im to abandon his present attitude, it will be a great an.

Everywhere in this very Conservative constituency objection to suffrage on the lines of the Conciliation Bill is melting away—to the wide measure there is still a fairly solid opposition in many quarters. While Miss Thompson and I have been working the memorial in Lytham and St. Annees, we have been making preliminary enquiries which we confidently hope will lead to meetings either public or private in both these places in the near future. I should not like to end my report without saying how greatly the success of the Fleetwood meeting was due to the indefatigable work of Miss Colquitt in distributing handbills.

THE COMMON CAUSE.

The most passionate and powerful political agitation our generation has seen has forced the Government to take action. If that action is to be on democratic lines, if it is to establish politi-cal equality and set free a subject sex, then the task of organising public opinion, of forcing forward the claim of the disfranchised and secur-ing alexterel inside and heat he does by these ing electoral justice can best be done by those who in their political work and agitation have always advocated fair and equal treatment for both sexes, by those who are inspired by the Socialist ideal.

Socialist ideal. Therefore we go to the Royal Albert Hall. Four meetings on the Suffrage question will be held during the month at the Albert Hall. Our meeting comes first. Our task is to see that in numbers, enthusiasm, and deep conviction the position of first place is maintained. The opportunity for a brave, strong, lead is placed within our reach and careful note will be made by both friend and foe of how the rank and file respond.

by both friend and foe of how the rank and file respond. The reputation of the Party is now at stake. Success now will win to our side to fight for economic justice thousands of the bravest spirits now fighting against electoral injustice. A whole world of wrong and suffering lies around us wait-ing until we can link up into political equality those who know as we know and feel as we feel but are denied the rights of citizenship. The franchise struggle must be settled now and socialist movement of London is now called on to come up with high hope and firm courage to the Albert Hall on February 13th, and give emphatic and united support to the demand for full political equality between the sexes."

Foreign News.

France.

A most important reform, for which Frenchwomen have been pressing for many years is now on the eve of achievement. It is commonly known as "La Recherche de la Paternité," as the known as "La Recherche de la Patermité," as the article in the Code Napoleon which dealt with the subject laid it down that "La recherche de la Paternité est interdite." This iniquitous doctrine has continued till the present day to be the law of France. Now we learn that the Chamber has adopted without any discussion the new law on the subject, which was initiated by the Sanata more than a war area. As the word new law on the subject, which was initiated by the Senate more than a year ago. As the word-ing presented to the Chamber by M. Maurice Violette differed slightly from that in which it was passed by the Senate the bill must be returned to that Assembly for final ratification. This is, however, only a matter of form. The "Francaise" says that in the midst of the dis-cussions on electorial reform this great change aroused so little attention that on the following day some of the best informed papers did not even report it, and others only gave it a couple of lines. The real meaning of the law is that for the first time in France the father of an illegitimate child is legally bound to share the responsibility for its maintenance.

responsibility for its maintenance. On January 21 a public lecture was held at the Nice Hotel de Ville by Mademoiselle Azinières, a professor at the Girls Lycée, on the subject of universal suffrage and its meaning for won Norway. The following Reuter's telegram appeared in "Both sections of the Storthing have adopted the Bill admitting women to appointment as public officials, and have resolved to send the Bill to the King for his assent."

United States.

United States. This should be a record year in the American as in the English Suffrage movement. No fewer than six states will consider the question in 1912. These six states together have a population of nearly ten million, more than a tenth of the whole population of the United States. The campaign states are: Wisconsin, Kansas, Nevada, Oregon, Ohio and New Hampshire. These two latter will decide at their Constitutional Conven-tions whether to submit the question to the voters in the course of the year. The Nevada Legislature will decide whether it is to be sub-mitted in 1914. It is already decided that the question shall be submitted to the electors of the other three states in November next. Arduous question shall be submitted to the electors of the other three states in November next. Arduous work, therefore, is in front of our American fellow-suffragists, but "there is nothing succeeds like success" and the flowing tide is with them. The "Women's Journal" says that the Ohio Constitutional Convention opened at Columbus early in January, with a large proportion of recommended the submission of Women's Suffrage to the voters. Cleveland (Ohio) has taken a most important step. The Board of Health has promoted Miss Mildred Chadsey to be its chief sanitary m-spector. She will have charge of the city's force of sanitary police, including two sergeants, a woman inspector of factories and workshops and about 25 sanitary patrolmen. She will not only have charge of the police force in the department, but the entire bureau of sanitation will be under her direction. her direction.

THE ENGLISHWOMAN.

THE ENGLISHWOMAN. The February number is full of good things, Miss Clementina Black deals in her customary by Mr. George Calderon of activities into masculine and feminine, the first directed to "hare existence," the second to "health and comfort." Miss Black does not ask but one wonders how the race would even "barely" exist if there were no mothers! The article deals further with the possibilities of a Con-sumer's League and shows why Miss Black and there who had hoped good results from such a ombination had to abandon that hope. "Law and law only," says Miss Black, "can check the will sof unlimited competition"—and therefore show an ought "—to do a thousand irreconcilable hings. In an article on the Public Health service, which is full of interesting information there who has to feel how very much still remains to be done in securing the proper training. we are made to feel how very much still remains to be done in securing the proper training, recognition and remuneration of women in this department of life, surely one suited to women. Full of genial humour and sense is Mrs. Marshall's plea for "elasticity" in domestic service. Miss Lowndes contributes a semi-humorous ghost story with the vagueness of detail proper to suggest a thrill and there are interest-ing reviews and other articles.

LADY VICTORIA CAMPBELL. A memoir by Lady Frances Balfour. (Hodder and Stoughton, 6s. net.)

Frances Balfour. (Hodder and Stoughton, 6s. net.) This memoir comes like a clear trumpet call across the dusty arena where women must per-force toil day by day. It fell to Lady Campbell's lot to work chieffy in the Isles which are part of the lands of Argyle, and the conditions under which that work was undertaken and carried out will put fresh heart into every woman who reads this record. Lady Victoria was a cripple, but she did the work of nine men; she crossed the Islands in the roughest of seas, she landed in weather which made brave people anxious, and she "knew the land question in a manner which would have shamed the knowledge of most members of Parliament." Naturally, one asks how did so great a woman view the struggle for the enfranchisement of women? Lady Frances Balfour writes: "She was an early supporter of the movement for the enfranchisement of women. Here, again, her convictions came to her through experience. She knew how imperfect were the laws which regulated the industrial lives of women, and she felt how little legislators had done to protect and guard the morals of girls and children; and she had strong views on licensing and all temperance legislation. As usual, it was the desire to have the power to do something, to have the responsibility of the faiths that wear in her that made her desireous usual, it was the desire to have the power to do something, to have the responsibility of the faiths that were in her, that made her desirous of having a vote." And again: "In the last year of her life, when physical strength was at a very low ebb, and her enterprises were limited, a member of her family went into her London lodging, after a day of somewhat strenuous exertion. She was saluted by the figure on the conch leaning forward eagerly, holding out a pamphlet, the face full of the spirit that quickeneth: 'F., the moment you have done with this Commission, you must take up the white slave traffic'." No quotations can adequately do justice to the white slave traffic'." No quotations can adequately do justice to the account of the life of this brave woman, who worked in season and out of season, supported and upheld by the faith that was in her. Those whose spirits are flagging in the battle should read this record—I can only describe it as a trumpet call, full and sweet and rousing.

"VOTES AND WAGES": A CORRECTION. "VOTES AND WAGES": A CORRECTION. May I correct a reference given wrongly in my pam-phlet, "Votes and Wages"? On the first page, the reference to the Board of Trade Report on Earnings and Hours Enquiry, 1906, should be to the Select Committee on Home-Work, 1907 (p. 139, Sec. 2,753). I regret the mistake, which arose out of a confused arrangement of my notes, both because it has, I fear, given my readers some trouble, and because the fact should have been definitely stated as being the evidence of Miss Mary Macarthur, had I not been misled by my own clumsiness in arranging my notes. I have written at some length on this point in this week's Standard, and therefore will not ask you for more space.

THE REVOLT OF THE DAUGHTERS. MISS THEODORA MILLS (Cheltenham) writes that this was "a symposium of articles by various writers, pub-lished in the Westminster Review about 1894." [We have enquired, and find the Nineteenth Century, January, 1894, had an article by Mrs. Crackanthorpe ; March, 1894, articles by Mrs. Haweis and Mrs. Crackan-thorpe, and a reply from the daughters by Lady Kath-leen Cuffe and Miss Alys Pearsall Smith. The articles caused a considerable correspondence in the contem-porary daily and weekly press.—ED. "C. C."]

S. J. S. LOOKER (Stoke Newington) writes to say that the Anti-Suffragists would do better to try and improve the lot of sweated industrial women than to raise the cry that "Women's place is the home." He adds, " I am rather inclined to think that the unprecedented foolishness of the anti-suffrage crusade is doing a great deal for the suffrage movement generally."

MENT ASSOCIATION. A meeting was held on February 1st at 33, Molesworth Street. Mrs. Haslam was in the chair and there was a large attendance. Rev. R. M. Gwynn, F.T.O.D. spoke on why Irish women workers need the vote. He referred to the case of women workers in Belfast and the half-time system. He shid that the vote was not to make people contented but to make them discontented and the Irish people, especially the women workers of Dublin, were not discontented enough. Miss Mary Hayden, M.A., Councillor Miss Harrison and Miss O'Brennan (Secretary of the Industrial Law Committee) also spake. Miss Duggan, LL.B. proposed a vote of thanks to the speakers, which was seconded by Mr. Kenting and cordi-ally carried.
