November 9th, 1909.

Dear Miss Mason,

I write on behalf of the Executive Committee to ask you whether you will do them the great kindness of taking the Chair at the adjourned Annual Meeting of the London Society. It is to be held on Saturday afternoon November 20th in St. James' Hall. My Committee expressed the unanimous wish to have you in the Chair and Mrs Fawcett went straight off to the Coburg Hotel with the intention of asking you herself. Finding that you were away she has desired me to write as she is off to Manchester herself today.

May I take this opportunity of offering my private thanks for the very nice and encouraging things you have said about our report. Your letter did not come before the Executive yesterday as it was a Special Meeting, so I will bring it up on the 17th. I hope that your suggestion about the printing of amendments may be taken next year. I did not forget your letter of last November and I brought it up again at the Committee at which the arrangements for this Annual Meeting were settled but it was not thought there would be any necessity for it this year.
