Free Trade – YES!

Research shows the average British household could be £933 per year better off if Britain left the European Union.

Imagine how the UK leaving the European Union would help you and your family...

Cost of living reduced!

Cost of Living

Being part of the European Union means that food prices have increased because of the food subsidies given to farmers in other countries; fishing stocks have decreased due to the European Union's disastrous fisheries policy; regulations passed by the European Union have reduced your choice over what you can buy and have increased the costs of your shopping.

Energy

Big businesses have been able to lobby the European Union for their own benefit, pushing up your energy bills. Inside the European Union, we are being pulled into the European Union's Energy Union that could increase the control of large corporates over your energy needs.

More care and attention to the NHS!

NHS

The NHS requires the very best of care and attention. Inside the European Union, regulations reduce the ability for trained professionals to work. Inside the European Union, money that could be spent on our most precious public service is instead going to bureaucrats in Brussels that have their interests at heart, not yours.

Police

Policing services are under threat and the security of our local communities is being compromised. The cuts in police numbers and further planned cuts to police budgets could leave the public unprotected against serious crimes. Outside the European Union, the Government could use the money we pay every year to the European Union for membership for investment in policing.

More investment in policing!
