STANDAARDINDELING VAN STEDELIKE EN PLATTELANDSE GEBIEDE.

Die indeling van die bevolking in persone wat in stedelike en persone wat in plattelandse gebiede woon, volgens van periodieke bevolkingsensusse verkry, kan vir baie nuttige doeleindes aangewend word.

Sonder om hulle volledig te noem of in besonderhede te bespreek, kan daarvan melding gemaak word, dat dié indeling dit moontlik maak om die mate en die proses van verstedeliking, die tempo van bevolkingsaanwas en -bewegings en hul verhouding tot ekonomiese, maatskaplike en demografiese verskynsels, soos produksie, vervoer, handel en volksinkome; gesondheid, behuising, onderwys en volkswelsyn; gesinskenmerke, ouderdom- en geslagsamestelling en sterftesyfers, ens., te bestudeer.

Dit dien as 'n waardevolle leidraad vir die Staat, plaaslike bestuur en openbare en private liggame, met die oog op die beplanning van ekonomiese en maatskaplike ontwikkeling.

Die meerendeel van ons het 'n taamlik duidelike begrip van wat bedoel word met die woorde "stedelik" en "plattelands" of met "stad (of dorp)" enersyds en "platteland" andersyds.

Nogtans, wanneer 'n mens te doen kry met die werklike indeling volgens "stedelik" en "plattelands", van gebiede wat deur middel van plekname met verskillende grade van bevolkingskonsentrasie vereenselwig kan word, moet gedugte moeilikhede die hoof gebied word. Die probleem van 'n standaardindeling word nie deur die rassesamestelling van die Unie se bevolking minder ingewikkeld gemaak nie. Inderdaad, die moeilikhede word heelwat ingewikkelder.

Die verspreiding van die bevolking wissel van die mees plattelandse streek, enersyds, tot die in hoogste graad stedelike of metropolitaanse streek, andersyds. Tussen hierdie uiterstes vind 'n mens grade van verspreiding van die mees plattelandse tot die mins plattelandse gebiede en van die mins stedelike tot die mees stedelike gebiede. Dit is duidelik en vanselfsprekend dat daar geen duidelike of bepaalde skeidslyn is waar die plattelandse gebied eindig en die stedelike gebied begin nie. Dit spreek dus vanself dat die afbakening tussen stedelike en plattelandse gebiede vir statistiese doeleindes noodwendig willekeurig moet wees.

Verskeie maatstawwe kan oorweeg word met die oog op die standaardisering van die stedelike en die plattelandse bevolking. Een maatstaf, bv. is volgens groottegroepen, d.w.s., die indeling van versamelings of klompes mense in 'n reeks groottegroepen van verspreide wonings tot omvangryke bevolkingskonsentrasies bo 'n gegewe grootte. Volgens hierdie metode is die indelingseenheid die versameling mense, en word die amptelike grenslyne van administratiewe afdelings buite rekening gelaat. Indien hierdie grootte-indeling oorweeg gaan word, wat moet as die laagste perk beskou word? Moet die indeling op grondslag van die totale bevolking of slegs van die blanke bevolking geskied? Gestel dat 'n naturelle woonbuurt of 'n lokasie grens aan, of is in die nabyheid van 'n stedelike gebied (bv. 'n munisipaliteit), waarvan dit ekonomies afhanklik is, moet dit noodwendig as plattelands beskou word indien dit, wat grootte betref, onder die laagste perk van die stedelike indeling val? Indien so 'n lokasie, ongeag sy grootte, as stedelik beskou word omdat hy so na aan die moederstad geleë is of ekonomies van so 'n stad afhanklik is, moet 'n groot en digbewoonde naturelle gebied wat los en ver van die blanke beskawing lê (bv. 'n "kafferstat" in 'n reservaat), noodwendig as stedelik ingedeel word slegs omdat die grootte van die bevolkingkonsentrasie binne die perke van die stedelike indeling val? Daar kan min twyfel bestaan dat, in voornoemde gevalle, die soort bedrywigheid of die vernaamste bron van inkomste of bestaan van die mense wat in sulke klompe woon - hetsy landboukundig al dan nie - die belangrikste oorweging moet wees wanneer besluit moet word of 'n gebied onder die stedelike of onder die plattelandse kategorie ressorteer. Soortgelyke maar nie-identiese gevalle is dié van onderstedelike gebiede (met plekname maar sonder wetlike status) wat grens aan of in die nabyheid is van groot stede (munisipaliteite). Hierdie gebiede word later bespreek. Om die bevolking volgens stedelike en plattelandse gebiede slegs op grondslag van die grootte van die bevolkingssametrekking in te deel, is misleidend. Watter ander maatstawwe ook al aangewend word, is daar natuurlik in beginsel geen beswaar teen die indeling, onderskeidelik, van stedelike en plattelandse streke, volgens grootte-groepe nie. Die moeilikheid is daarin geleë om die plattelandse bevolkingssametrekking te identifiseer en hul grenslyne te bepaal.

'n Ander grondslag vir die indeling van stedelike en plattelandse gebiede (en toevallig ook 'n grondslag wat deur 'n groot aantal lande die meeste gebruik word), is dié wat betrekking het op die tipe plaaslike bestuur of administrasie - d.w.s., om as stedelik te beskou alle stede en dorpe (afgesien van grootte en status) wat die een of ander vorm van wetlik saamgestelde stedelike plaaslike bestuur het, en om as plattelands te beskou alle ander gebiede met inbegrip van identifiseerbare versamelings of klompe mense. Sulke klein administratiewe indelings het die voordeel dat hulle sensusstatistiek verskaf ten opsigte van gebiede wat betreklik bestendige en algemeen herkenbare grense het. Op die laagste perk kan hierdie gebiede uit betreklik min verspreide wonings bestaan en op die hoogste perk uit sterk gekonsentreerde sametrekkinge van mense, soos bv. die digbewoonde stede en dorpe.

Daar moet gelet word op die feit dat daar 'n aanmerklike afwisseling in bevolkingssametrekking binne 'n munisipaliteit kan wees. Die meeste stedelike gebiede bestaan uit 'n "beboude" deel sowel as uit "dorpsgrond". In die geval van sekere munisipaliteite waar die wetlik vasgestelde grense 'n gebied tot 50 vk. myl groot omsluit, kan die "beboude" deel minder as 10 persent van die totaal uitmaak. In ander gevalle kan die hele munisipale gebied "bebou" wees. Hierdie punt moet in gedagte gehou word wanneer die betreklike digtheid van die bevolking in stedelike gebiede met mekaar vergelyk word.

Hierdie /.....

Hierdie indeling het egter niks te maak met radiale bevolkingssametrekking binne die grense van stedelike gebiede nie. Dit het slegs betrekking op die indeling van sulke gebiede, wanneer beskou in teenstelling tot plattelandse gebiede.

Om die stedelike indeling op die wetlik vasgestelde gebiede van plaaslike besture te baseer, ongeag hul grootte, kan die begrip "stedelik" te veel rek. Daar is 'n aantal sulke gebiede waar die bevolking nie meer as 200 persone is nie. Aan die ander kant, indien 'n beperking, bv. 'n perk op grootte, ingestel word, kan dit die begrip "plattelands" nie genoeg nie of te veel rek, na gelang van omstandighede. Daar steek voordeel in om as "stedelik" te aanvaar alle wetlik vasgestelde gebiede van plaaslike besture, ongeag grootte, deurdat die totale van sulke gebiede 'n gladder en meer aaneenlopende groeikurwe van een sensus na die volgende toon. Dit is die stedelik-plattelandse indeling wat tot en met die 1946-sensus in die Unie gevolg is.

Daar is 'n verdere maatstaf betreffende die stedelik-plattelandse indeling, naamlik, om behalwe die wetlik vasgestelde gebiede van plaaslike besture alle "verstedelike" gebiede as stedelik te beskou, d.w.s., woongebiede sonder enige vorm van plaaslike bestuur te wete, eerstens onderstedelike gebiede van stede en dorpe en, tweedens, die los stedelike sametrekkinge of nedersettings van mense in plattelandse gebiede.

In eersgenoemde geval is die uitdrukking "plattelandse voorstad" in vorige sensusse gebruik. Plattelandse voorstede is tot 1946 volgens pleknaam geïdentifiseer maar as plattelands geklassifiseer. Hierdie uitdrukking is nou deur die uitdrukking "onderstedelike gebied" vervang. Die woord "voorstad" word nie gebruik nie, aangesien dit verwarring kan veroorsaak deurdat dit gewoonlik van toepassing is op spesifieke gebiede binne 'n stedelike gebied (munisipaliteit). Die "onderstedelike gebiede" van groot stede is dié woongebiede wat buite die munisipale grense geleë is maar wel daaraan grens. Hulle het geen vorm van stedelike plaaslike administrasie nie. Hoewel hulle nie onder beheer van die moedermunisipaliteit val nie, kan hulle nietemin, vir alle praktiese doeleindes, as deel van daardie stad beskou word omdat hulle gewoonlik 'n beslis stedelike aard het en ekonomies, maatskaplik en andersins in noue verbinding met die moedermunisipaliteit verkeer. Daar word ook daagliks heelwat tussen die "onderstedelike gebiede" en die moedermunisipaliteit gereis. Indien die maatstaf om sodanige gebiede as stedelik te klassifiseer aanvaar word, spreek dit vanself dat alle dergelike gebiede (ongeach die grootte van die bevolkingssametreking, hetsy in sy geheel of op rassegrondslag) wat beskou word as "behorende" tot die moederstad, as stedelik beskou moet word. Terwille van die kontinuïteit is dit belangrik dat hierdie "onderstedelike gebiede" taamlik duidelik omskrewe grenslyne moet hê, anders bestaan daar die gevaar dat agtereenvolgende sensusse met verskillende grense te doen kry. Dit het gebeur in die geval van die omliggende gebiede van Bloemfontein, met die gevolg dat die bevolkingsyfers vir verskeie van hierdie gebiede van sensus tot sensus nie met mekaar vergelykbaar is nie. Daar is egter noodwendig 'n mate van willekeurigheid ten opsigte van watter "onderstedelike gebiede" wat deur middel van plekname geïdentifiseer kan word, beskou kan word as "behorende" by die moederstad. Die gebied van die moederstad of munisipaliteit en die "onderstedelike gebiede" kan gesamentlik beskou word as 'n "metropolitaanse gebied". Daar moet gelet word op die feit dat 'n metropolitaanse gebied in sommige gevalle meer as een wetlik vasgestelde gebied van 'n plaaslike bestuur, benewens die onderstedelike gebied, kan insluit. Om die metropolitaanse gebied (eerder as slegs die moedermunisipaliteit) as die eenheid van stedelike bevolkingsametrekking te beskou, bied die besliste voordeel dat die moedermunisipaliteit se gebied van tyd tot tyd groter word namate dit dele absorbeer wat voorheen as onderstedelike gebiede ingedeel was. Bowendien bly die grenslyne van die metropolitaanse gebied betreklik bestendig en gee die bevolking binne daardie grense 'n beter aanduiding van die groei van die gebied van stedelike bevolkingskonsentrasie in sy geheel as enigeen van sy dele.

Dit het gebeur in die geval van die omliggende gebiede van Bloemfontein,

Daar is gevalle van bevolkingskonsentrasies wat nie 'n erkende vorm van stedelike plaaslike bestuur het nie (los en ver van enige groot stede af en dus nie binne metropolitaanse gebiede nie) wat uitkenbaar is deur middel van plekname en wat of as stedelik of as plattelands ingedeel kan word. In vorige sensusse is die uitdrukking "plattelandse dorp" gebruik om sulke gebiede aan te dui, en hulle word beskou as dorpie of dunbevolkte woongebiede. Die gebiede wat hoofsaaklik plattelands van aard is, soos bv. landbouhoeves en besproeiingskemas, kan wel as 'n "plattelandse dorp" beskou word, en in die plattelandse indeling afsonderlik as sodanig aangedui word. Aan die ander kant kan sekere "afgesonderde" gebiede wel as stedelik beskou word indien hulle stedelik van aard is maar nog nie 'n stedelike bestuur verkry het of nodig het nie. Dergelyke gebiede sou homogene gemeenskappe insluit, soos bv. sendingstasies, spoorweg-, myn en nywerheidsdorpe waar die betrokke owerhede of maatskappye verantwoordelikheid aanvaar vir die bestuur en die welsyn van die gemeenskap. Sulke gebiede word sedert die bevolkingsensus van 1951, deur die uitdrukking "kwasi-stedelike dorpe" aangedui.

Soos hierbo vermeld, is die indeling van stedelike en plattelandse gebiede in die Unie tot en met die 1946-sensus streng op grondslag van wetlik vasgestelde stedelike gebiede gebaseer, d.w.s. alle stede en dorpe, ongeag hul grootte, wat die een of ander vorm van wetlik ingestelde stedelike plaaslike bestuur gehad het, is as stedelik ingedeel (sien tabel 1 van hierdie verslag - items (a) tot (h) is die vasgestelde stedelike gebiede). Al die orige gebiede, selfs indien hulle 'n taamlik groot bevolking het, is as plattelands ingedeel. By voorbeeld, Premiersmyn (Cullinan) het in 1931 'n bevolking van 2,037 blankes gehad - wat meer was as baie ingestelde stedelike gebiede - maar nogtans is dit as plattelands ingedeel omdat dit geen vorm van plaaslike bestuur gehad het nie.

Vir die/.....

Vir die 1951-sensus is dan egter besluit om die indeling te wysig deur by die stedelike afdelings in te sluit die onderstedelike gebiede en die kwasi-stedelike dorpe, soos hierbo vermeld, bo en behalwe al die gevestigde stedelike gebiede wat reeds voorheen daarby ingesluit was. Oor die algemeen is die bevolking van geeneen van hierdie gebiede baie groot nie (behalwe in die geval van naturelledorpe of lokasies wat onder regstreekse beheer van 'n stedelike gebied kan staan hoewel buite die gebied se wetlike grense) omdat, sodra die bevolkingsyfer hoog genoeg gestyg het, die gebied of tot 'n stedelike gebied verklaar word of as gevolg van voortdurende radiale stedelike uitbreiding, in 'n aangrensende stedelike gebied ingelyf word.

Plattelandse gebiede. Daar moet duidelik gelet word op die feit dat die bevolking van plattelandse gebiede, soos ingedeel in hierdie verslag, nie geheel-en-al uit die boerebevolking of die bevolking wat op plase woon, bestaan nie.

Afgesien van die feit dat, wat die bevolkingsensus betref, die opname van persone volgens 'n de facto grondslag, en nie volgens 'n de jure grondslag nie, geskied, bestaan die plattelandse bevolking uit die getal persone wat tydens die sensus op plase opgeneem is plus die plattelandse nie-boerebevolking. Laasgenoemde groep sluit in klein en onidentifiseerde "gebiede", soos bv. plattelandse winkels, spoorwegstasies en haltes, plekkies waar 'n poskantoor of 'n polisiestasie is met 'n paar wonings daarop, klein sendingstasies, ens. En, omgekeerd, moet begryp word dat daar binne die geproklameerde grense van baie stedelike gebiede in 'n mate landboubedrywighede, veral suiwelboerdery en groentekwekery, beoefen word.

Internasionale vergelykbaarheid. Dit is duidelik dat die Unie se standaardindeling van stedelike en plattelandse gebiede nie toelaat dat daar met ander lande vergelykings getref word nie. Daar bestaan groot verskille onder lande met betrekking tot die omskrywing van stedelike en plattelandse bevolking, en internasionale owerhede beskou dit tans nie as doenlik om eenvormige omskrywings van stedelike en plattelandse bevolking vir internasionale gebruik te gee nie.

Om egter te owerdoenlik internasionale vergelykbaarheid te verkry, word individuele lande dringend versoek om, bo en behalwe hul eie indelingstelsels, hul bevolkings volgens grootte van versamelings of klompies mense in te deel. Die "Population Division of the Statistical Office of the United Nations" beveel 'n minimum van nege groottegroeppe aan - en dit sou dan die grondslag vir kruistabellering volgens ander kenmerke kan uitmaak (bv. volgens geslag, ouderdom, ens.)

Die grondslag waarop so'n tabellering moet geskied, verg sorgvuldige oorweging met die oog op die Unie se rassamestelling, en dit mag nodig wees al na gelang van die aard van die kenmerke, om twee verskillende grondslae te tabelleer: nl., eerstens, die totale bevolking en, tweedens, slegs die blanke bevolking.

Opmerkings/.....

Opmerkings oor Tabele. Die tabelle in hierdie publikasie toon aan hoe die verskillende stede en dorpe dwarsdeur die Unie en Suidwes-Afrika ingedeel is vir die doel van die Bevolkingsensus wat op 8 Mei 1951 afgeneem is.

Die bedoeling is om hierdie indeling te standaardiseer ten opsigte van alle werksaamhede van die Buro vir Sensus en Statistiek.

1. Status van gebiede.

Tabel 1 toon aan die verskillende tipes gebiede en die afkortings wat gebruik word om hulle in elke afsonderlike geval aan te dui. Gebiede (a) tot (h) is geproklameerde stedelike gebiede kragtens die een of ander van die verskillende Wette vir die instelling van stedelike gebiede. Gebiede (i) en (j) is gebiede wat as stedelik van inslag beskou, en derhalwe as stedelik ingedeel word, hoewel hulle nie onder een van die groepe (a) tot (h) ressorteer nie. Gebiede (k) is die klein bevolkingskonsentrasies wat nie as stedelik genoeg van aard beskou word om hul insluiting by die stedelike groep te regverdig nie en gevolglik by die plattelandse bevolking ingesluit word, hoewel hulle tog afsonderlik aangegee word.

Stadsrade in Transvaal, asook 'n aantal van die groter stede wat as "grootstede" bekend is, is ingesluit onder groep (a) - Munisipaliteite.

2. Metropolitaanse gebiede.

Daar is 'n algemene neiging vir die bevolking van groot stedelike sentra om buite die geproklameerde grense van die huidige munisipaliteit uit te brei, en die metropolitaanse gebiede wat by tabel 2 ingesluit word, is so gerangskik dat hulle sover moontlik, die aangrensende gebiede wat stedelik van inslag en ekonomies aan die moederstad verbonde is, insluit.

3. Stedelike gebiede wat in meer as een Magistraatsdistrik geleë is.

'n Paar stede, soos in tabel 3 aangetoon, het hul grense tot in die aangrensende magistraatsdistrikte uitgebrei, en dit is belangrik om daarop te let dat in sulke gevalle die gedeeltes in die verskillende distrikte bymekaar gevoeg moet word om die totaal vir die hele stad te verkry.

4. Dorpe in elke Magistraatsdistrik.

Tabel 4 toon aan watter dorpe in elke magistraatsdistrik val, en hulle is in twee kolomme gerangskik. Dorpe in die eerste kolom, onder die opskrif "Stedelike Gebiede" is al dié wat as stedelik ingedeel is (gebiede (a) tot (j) in tabel 1), terwyl die gebiede in kolom 2 as plattelands geklassifiseer is (gebied (k) in tabel 1).

5. Nuwe

5. Nuwe Magistraatsdistrikte.

Tabel 5 toon aan die nuwe distrikte wat gestig is sedert die sensus op 8 Mei 1951 gehou is. Aangesien Parys en Viljoenskroon kort na die sensus (nl. op 1 Augustus 1951) ingestel is, word hulle by tabel 4 ingesluit en word hulle behandel asof hulle op die sensusdatum afsonderlike distrikte was.

6. Nuwe Stedelike Besture en veranderinge in Status sedert 8 Mei 1951.

Sedert die sensus van 8 Mei 1951, is 'n aantal nuwe stedelike gebiede gestig en ander het 'n statusverandering ondergaan. Hierdie veranderinge word in tabel 6 aangetoon en sluit wysigings tot en met 31 Januarie 1953 in.

MEI 1953.

STANDARD CLASSIFICATION OF URBAN AND RURAL AREA.

The classification of the population into those living in urban and those living in rural areas, as derived from periodic censuses of population, serves many important uses.

Without enumerating these fully or discussing them in any detail, mention could be made of the following: The classification permits the study of the degree and the process of urbanization, rates of population growth and movements and their relationship to economic, social and demographic phenomena such as production, transportation, trade and national income; health, housing, education and welfare; family characteristics, age and sex composition and mortality, etc.

It serves as a valuable guide to the state, local authorities and public and private bodies in planning economic and social development.

Most of us have a fairly clear understanding as to what is meant by the terms "urban and rural" or by city (or town) on the one hand, and "country" on the other.

However, when it comes to the actual allocation of areas as urban or rural, identifiable by place names with varying degrees of population concentration, formidable difficulties are encountered. The problem of a standard classification is not made any less difficult by virtue of the racial composition of the Union's population. In fact, the difficulties are considerably enhanced.

The distribution of the population varies, from the most rural area on the one hand, to the most urban or metropolitan area, on the other hand. Between these extremes one finds a graduated distribution from the most rural to the least rural and from the least urban to the most urban. It is evident that there is no clear cut or definite point where rural ends and urban begins. It follows therefore, that any line drawn between urban and rural, for statistical purposes, must necessarily be arbitrary.

Various criteria could be considered in standardizing the urban and rural population.

One criterion, for instance, is division according to size groups, that is, the classification of agglomerations or clusters of population into a series of size groups from scattered dwellings to large concentrations above a given size. In this method the unit of classification is the agglomeration and the official boundary lines of administrative divisions are ignored. If this size classification is to be considered, what is to be regarded as the lower limit? Should this be on the basis of the total population, or on the white population only? If, say, a cluster of native people, or a native location, is situated adjacent or in close proximity to an urban area (e.g. municipality) and economically dependent upon it, should it necessarily be classified as rural if it falls, as far as size is concerned, below the lower limit of the urban classification? If such a location, irrespective of size, be considered as urban by virtue of its immediate proximity to an economic dependence on the parent town, should a large and highly concentrated native area, detach and distant from white civilisation (for instance a "kafferstat" in the reserves), necessarily be classified as urban, merely because the size of the cluster falls within the limits of the urban classification? There appears to be little doubt that, in the instances mentioned above, the type of activity or the main source of income or livelihood of the population living in these clusters - whether agricultural or non-agricultural should be the prime consideration in deciding whether the area should fall in the urban or in the rural category. Similar, but not identical instances, are those of sub-urban areas (identifiable by place names but without legal status, adjacent in close proximity to large towns (municipalities). These areas are discussed at a later stage. Classifying the population into urban and rural merely on the basis of size of cluster is misleading. Whatever other criteria are adopted, there is of course, no objection in principle to the classification of urban areas and rural areas respectively, by size groups. The difficulty lies in identifying rural clusters and determining their boundaries.

A further basis for classification of urban and rural areas (and, incidentally, a basis most commonly adopted by a large number of countries), is that of the type of local government or administration. On this basis, all cities, towns and villages, irrespective of size or status which have some form of legally constituted urban local authority are classed as urban. All other areas, including identifiable agglomerations or clusters of population, are considered as rural. Such small administrative divisions have the advantage of producing census statistics for areas which have relatively stable and generally recognizable boundaries. At the lower limit, these areas may consist of a relatively few scattered dwellings and at the upper limit, of a highly concentrated agglomeration of population as, for instance, as the more populous cities and towns.

It should be noted that there may be an appreciable variation of population concentration within a municipality. Most urban areas comprise a "built-up" area as well as town lands. In the case of certain municipalities, where the legally constituted boundaries comprise an area of up to 50 sq. miles, the "built-up" area may be less than 10 per cent of the total. In other cases, the entire area of the municipality may be "built-up". This point should be borne in mind when comparing relative densities of populations in urban areas.

However, this classification is not concerned with radial concentrations of the population within the boundary limits of urban areas. It is solely concerned with the classification of such areas as distinct from "rural".

Basing the urban classification upon legally constituted local authority areas, irrespective of size, may stretch the concept of urban too far. There are a number of such areas where the population does not exceed 200 persons. On the other hand, if a restriction, say, size limit, were imposed, it may stretch the concept of a rural classification not far enough or too far, depending on circumstances. There is an advantage in accepting all legally constituted local authority areas, irrespective of size, as urban in that the totals of such areas would show from one census to the next a smoother and more continuous growth curve. This urban-rural classification has been followed in the Union up to and including the census of 1946.

There is a further criterion concerning the urban - rural classification, namely, to consider (in addition to the legally constituted local authority areas) all "urbanized" areas, that is, residential areas without any form of urban local authority, as urban. Such areas may be divided into two classes: firstly, sub-urban areas of cities and towns, and secondly, the detached urban concentrations or settlements in rural areas.

In the first instance, the term "rural suburb" was used in earlier censuses. Up to 1946, rural suburbs were identified by place names but classed as rural. This term has now been superseded by the term "sub-urban area". The term "suburb" is not used, as it may lead to confusion since the term is usually applied to specific areas within an urban area (municipality). The "sub-urban areas" of large towns are those residential areas situated outside but adjoining the municipal boundaries. They have no form of urban local administration. Although they do not fall under the control of the parent municipality they are nevertheless for all practical purposes regarded as part of that town because they usually have a distinctly urban character and are closely linked to the parent municipality economically, socially and otherwise. There is also a considerable amount of daily travel between the "sub-urban areas" and the parent municipality. If the criterion to classify such areas as urban be accepted, then it follows that all such areas, irrespective of size of cluster, either total or on a racial basis, which are considered to belong to the parent town, should be considered as urban. For the sake of continuity it is important that these "sub-urban areas" should have fairly clearly defined boundaries, otherwise there is the danger that quite different boundaries will be followed at successive censuses. This has happened with the surrounding areas of Bloemfontein with the result that the population figures for several of these areas are not comparable from census to census. There is, however, necessarily some arbitrariness in regard to which "sub-urban areas", identifiable by place names, are considered to "belong" to the parent town. The combined areas of the parent town or municipality and the "sub-urban areas" could be regarded as constituting a "metropolitan" area. In a number of instances, it should be noted that a metropolitan area may comprise more than one legally constituted local authority area in addition to the "sub-urban areas". To regard the "metropolitan area" as the unit of urban concentration, rather than only the parent municipality has a distinct advantage in that the area of the municipality extends from time to time as it absorbs areas formerly classified as "sub-urban areas". Furthermore, the boundaries of the metropolitan area are relatively stable, and the population within that area gives a better indication of the growth of that area of urban concentration as a whole than any of its parts.

There are instances of population clusters without any recognised form of urban local authority (detached and distant from any large towns and thus not falling within metropolitan areas) which are identifiable by place names and which could be classified as either urban or rural. In earlier censuses the term "rural township" was employed to designate these areas, and they are considered to be villages or sparsely population residential areas. Those areas which are essentially rural in character, such as agricultural holdings irrigation schemes could well be regarded and identified separately in the rural category as "Rural Township". On the other hand, certain "detached" areas could well be regarded as urban if they are urban in character but have not yet received, or do not as yet require, an urban authority. Such areas, would include, for instance, homogeneous communities such as mission stations, railway, mining and industrial towns where the authorities or companies concerned assume responsibility for the management and welfare of the community. The term designated to such areas as from the 1951 population census, is Quasi-Urban Townships.

As stated above, the classification of urban and rural areas in the Union up to and including the census of 1946 has been strictly on a legally established urban area basis, i.e. all towns and villages, irrespective of size, which had some form of urban local government, established by law, were classified as urban (see table 1 of this report: items (a) to (h) being the established urban areas). All other areas, even if having a fairly large population, were classified as rural. For example, Premier Mine (Cullinan) in 1931, had a population of 2037, white persons, a much larger population than many established urban areas, but was classified as rural, because it had no form of local government.

For the 1951 Census, however, it has been decided to modify the classification by including in the urban section the "sub-urban areas" and "quasi-urban townships" referred to above, in addition to all the established urban areas previously included. In general, the population of any of these areas is not very large (except in the case of native townships or locations which may be under the direct control of an urban area, although outside the legal boundary of the area), because as soon as the population reaches a sufficiently high figure the area is either proclaimed an urban area, or as a result of continuous gradual urban expansion, absorbed within an adjoining urban area.

RURAL AREAS. It should be clearly noted that the population living in rural areas as classified in this report, does not constitute solely and entirely the farming population or the population living on farms. Apart from the fact that, as far as population census is concerned, the enumeration is on a de facto and not on a de jure basis, the rural population comprises the number of persons enumerated at the time of the census on farms, plus the "rural non-farm" population. The latter group includes small and unidentifiable "areas" such as up country stores, railway stations and sidings, small places with a post office and or a police station with a few dwellings, small mission stations, etc.

Conversely, it must be understood that a certain amount of agricultural activity, particularly dairying and market gardening, is carried on within the proclaimed boundaries of many urban areas.

INTERNATIONAL COMPARABILITY: It is clear that the Union's standard classification of urban and rural areas does not permit of international comparison. There is a wide variation among countries in regard to the definition of urban and rural population, and international authorities do not consider it practicable at present to establish uniform definitions of urban and rural population for international use.

However, to achieve international comparability as far as possible, individual countries are enjoined to classify their population, in addition to their own national classifications, by size of agglomeration or cluster.

The Population Division of the Statistical Office of the United Nations recommends a minimum of nine size groups - this to form the basis for cross tabulation by other characteristics (for instance by sex, age, etc.).

The basis on which such tabulations will be made requires careful consideration in view of the Union's racial composition, and it may be necessary, depending upon the characteristic, to tabulate on two distinct bases, firstly on the total population and secondly on the white population only.

Notes to Tables. The tables in this publication show how the various towns and villages throughout the Union and South West Africa have been classified for the purposes of the Population Census taken on 8th May, 1951. It is intended to make this classification standard in respect of all operations carried out by the Bureau of Census and Statistics.

1. Status of Areas.

Table 1, shows the various types of area and the abbreviation used to indicate them in each case. Areas (a) to (h) are proclaimed urban areas under one or other of the various Acts for the establishment of urban areas. Areas (i) and (j) are areas which are considered to be urban in character and therefore are classified as urban, although not falling within any of the groups (a) to (h). Area (k) comprises the small clusters of population which are not considered sufficiently urban in character to be included in the urban population, and therefore, although shown separately, are included in the rural population.

Town Councils in the Transvaal, and also a number of the larger towns which are known as "cities" are included in group (a) - municipalities.

2. Metropolitan Areas. There is a general tendency for the population of the large urban centres to extend beyond the proclaimed boundaries of the present municipal area, and the metropolitan areas included in table 2, have been arranged to include as far as possible, adjoining areas which are urban in character and which are economically linked with the parent town.

3. Urban areas situated in more than one magisterial district.

A few towns, as shown in table 3, have extended their boundaries into adjoining magisterial districts, and it is important to note that in these cases the portions in the different districts must be added together to arrive at the total of the complete town.

4. Towns in each magisterial district.

Table 4, shows which towns fall in each magisterial district, and these have been arranged in two columns. Towns in the first column, headed "Urban Areas" are all those which are classified as urban (areas (a) to (j) in table 1), while those areas in column 2 are classified as rural (area (k) in table 1).

5. New Magisterial Districts. Table 5, shows the new districts established since the census was taken on 8th May, 1951. As Parys and Viljoenskroon were established shortly after the census (on 1st August, 1951), they have been included in table 4, and are being treated as if they were separate districts at the date of the census.

6. New urban authorities and changes in status since 8th May, 1951.

Since the census on 8th May, 1951, a number of new urban areas have been established and others have changed in status. These changes are shown in table 6, and include amendments up to 30th April, 1953.
