Wilkes Street. Large houses, built for weavers, the two upper floors being workshops with the large windows characteristic of the weaver's dwellings. These shops are now used & as tailors or other workshops and in addition to these shops, trades may be carried on in other parts of the houses. Houses are very dirty and swarm with vermin. They occupy one side of the ^{Street} the other being taken by the brewery stores, the high and unrelieved wall of which increases the dismal appearance of the street.

Had an interview with this man's son, who works for his father. Said his father (Queen Victoria) foreman, a Mr. Bull expects to get out every coat. This is tacitly allowed by the firm. Jews have got the coal trade because they understand the use of machinery better than the English & get more out of the machine.
