S. S. Ballarat

Thursday night.

My dearest Pippa,

We have arrived at the mouth of the Thames without any adventures. The Pilot leaves tomorrow at 12 at the Isle of Wight and will take this with him - There are ^{two} ~~three~~ other people in my cabin, but I have not yet made their acquaintance; I think one of them seems rather nice but I will send particulars by the next letter. Some of the passengers seem very promising: opposite me at dinner sits a man with one arm, and next him a fearful woman who I am sure drinks. She spent the afternoon seated with a bottle of champagne in the saloon - As it is quite calm still I am writing now in case the channel proves too much for me. It is rather cold but the cardigan jacket is a great success.

Kindly send me a letter to Brindisi to cheer me up -

Goodbye my love and don't be sad.

Give my love to Pappa & Mamma and all my dear family -

Yr loving
Ralph
