My dear Philippa

Will you come to tea next Friday? I am so sorry not to see you sooner but I am
engaged every morning
afternoon and evening till then. London life is such a rush, especially

When you have been away from so many friends and relations
for so long.

I can't tell you glad I am that our meeting
has not been stopped;
it seems so foolish that we should not see each other when Dick and I

we quite determined to marry each other some happy day; it is only a case of waiting, which is very horrid but good for us no doubt.
We shall hardly know
ourselves when we can be together without fear of getting into trouble over it. Come as soon after four as you can on Friday and we will go on to the Imperial Institute and hear Strauss.

Some day when I am feeling very brave I am coming to by Lancaster Gate.

Yours affec^{tl}y

Grace. A. Norman
