Dear Mrs Ramelson,

I expect you have seen the current number of "Red Tape", with an excellent review of "The Petticoat Rebellion", and the picture of a women's suffrage procession on the cover. I do hope the book is doing well. Such reviews as I have seen have been good, and I trust this is reflected in the sales.

Apart from originally thanking for the gift of the book, I am ashamed that I have delayed so long to tell you that I much enjoyed reading it. The work in the Library seems to grow and grow, with the result that many of the things one would like to do don't get done for lack of time. I expect you have had a lot of letters of appreciation.

Today is actually my last day here, as I am at last retiring. I shall very much miss the many delightful contacts I have had with authors and other users of the Library. The Library, however, is being left in good hands, and I hope it will flourish more and more as time goes on.

With all good wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Mrs Ramelson
