My dear Kelly
According to promise I send you H.C. about Newham, but I can only hope that you will not be quite so much disgusted with it as myself. On re-reading it I found that my own in-pressions had undergone a change, but some statements appear evening in correct words, and others obsolete. I fancy I could and would write differently and rather better about it at this present moment. So I am very glad that at any rate my article was not published in its present crude form.

I hope you will not forget to send me back my mother's essay on the franchise, as I value it very much and have no other copy left.
Your mother's kind letter gave me much pleasure, though I was too busy to answer it at the time.

I trust I shall be able to avail myself of her kind invitation in the course of the next month and come on a trip from Saturday to Monday. Next Saturday I shall probably go ~~to~~ to Oxford, as the Rev.

Mark Pattison has asked me. It is a pity, I cannot make a holiday on Saturday, though, and go in the morning instead of the evening only.

I hope you have got rid of your conservative cold by this time and are quite equal to blossoming out as a radical again. I am scribbling these lines to-day, though I shall only send them by the leopard, but my week-days are too busy for chatting generally speaking. I find the holidays have quite demoralized my geography. To my great horror

I discovered after my lesson yesterday that I had passed off Belgium to them as covering an area of about twice 50,000 instead of 5000 □ The fact is, I get quite muddled when I have to deal with ~~numbers~~ figures and hundreds or thousands are in different to me, leaving no impression on my own mind. I am only afraid of the results in my pupils And what will the committee say when they find out this extraordinary peculiarity of their mistress of studies I am called down to afternoon - but so good. bye for to. day, my dear Ever yours affectly Alice v. Colton

How much better to give the fact in the morning to Miss Weston
