Dear Madam -

Your remarks about in dreams remorse quite agrees with my view - indeed I have read something like it in my 2^d paper - I rejoice to hear I was truly & rightly (as I fater from your note) on this, or some kindred subject.
The mystery of publication are very obscure - but if you will tell me more precisely by & by the length of the essay & its subject, I will find out in what way a comment

I can. The first class Magazines are always in state of congestion - but I will, if a desire is expressed the editor of Macmillan's to write of. U.S. etc

I feel authorized to do so on glancing over it. Some editors are so overworked that one has no right to trespass on their personal kindness unless with full hope the paper sent will be acceptable not only according to intrinsic merits - but the speciality of the Magazine I am impressed writers have an idea of time requiring 2 I should always advise the founder to be a book - ~~but~~ intention of the writer their natural taste has full play - I do not write a book I can ~~never~~ introduce to the audience himself - rather further down - I if the work is good he will probably offer to publish it at half profit - ~~but~~ perhaps at 1/2 expense - This is rare I see find book on a frame subject to be bought by a publisher
