Dear Miss Strachey

I am frightfully ashamed of myself for having failed to send this out at once.

My only excuse - or rather excuses - must be that I have been more busy than I ought to have let myself be getting out a book against time the last chapters of which must be in the pub.

2. When's hands on Saturday, and that at this same time I have been very much worried by a serious division of opinion within the Women's Industrial Council which has resulted in my resigning the Presidency.

Of course one ought not to neglect and forget things even when one is too busy and worried and at least I have the grace to be very much ashamed.

I think Miss Bell's note very wise.

As to the other letter it is obviously unavoidable for us to publish

The letter of Hill's is quite admirable but I rather feel with Mrs. Davis that it might be wiser to unbind it whole.

Very truly yours
